Two charged with dumping

Two men have been charged with illegal dumping after officials were able to trace materials to them. Bill Davis of RED Services of Burlington allegedly dumped building debris on the old Garden of Eden golf course on Chestnut Street. Robert Slockum of Stoneham has been charged with dumping material at the end of Lawrence Street.

The material on the golf course was traced to a house under renovation on Chestnut Street. The contractor said he paid Davis $100 a load to haul away three truckloads of building debris.

Health inspector Greg Erickson said the cases would be dealt with severely, since the dumping was done for money. The cases were solved with the cooperation of officials from conservation, police and the building inspector.

How dry it is

One look at the Burlington reservoir gives some idea of how low water supplies are. The town of Burlington last week stopped supplying Wilmington with supplementary water, prompting Wilmington to declare a ban on the outdoor use of water. The Burlington reservoir is located at the end of Chestnut Street where Burlington, Wilmington and Woburn meet.

Back-to-school advice from safety officer

Children in Wilmington return to school next week. Safety Officer Bob Shelley and Police Chief Bobby Stewart are urging motorists to drive carefully.

"Many children in kindergarten and first grade will be coping with traffic on their own for the first time," said Officer Shelley. "They may not be aware of pedestrian safety rules."

Shelley had some advice for concerned motorists. "Safe driving is a year-round responsibility, but it's even more important as schools open," he said. "Keep alert and always obey the posted speed limit, especially in school zones. That will make easier to come to a quick, safe stop if a child darts into your path." Busing is available for all students in the public schools this year. Chief Stewart and Officer Shelley recommend that students take the bus to and from school.

Because of the expanded busing program, there has been a reduction in the number of crossing guards. Crossing guards will be posted in the following locations only:

- Shawheen School
- Woburn Street School
- Waldwood School
- Federal Street Parkway
- High School
- Adams Street Fairview Ave.
- Marion Street Chestnut Street

Leaky floor drain blamed for odors

by Arlene Surprenant

A leaky floor drain in the high school cafeteria appears to be the cause of ongoing septic odors in the kitchen facility. The blame was placed on the drain following a smoke test performed on the septic system by engineers from Dana Perkins Inc.

The odors have stymied the contractor, engineers, and health officials in the past months as they sought to get to the root of the problem. Siphon counters for the leaching fields had already been tested. As a result, it was discovered that one worked and one didn't and there were numerous stones and debris in the siphon chamber tanks.

At their meeting Monday night, members of the Permanent Building Committee pushed to resolve the problem before the opening of school. It was noted that the kitchen floor may have to be dug up to repair the drain. It was also agreed the siphon tanks would have to be cleaned out.

Members felt a health problem could develop if any work with a jackhammer was undertaken in the cooking area during school hours. Architect Wilson Rains said he would send a letter to Glenn Sprague, project engineer for Dana Perkins, asking him to undertake repair work prior to September 9.

Affordable Housing Task Force reviews mink farm rezoning

by Arlene Surprenant

A project that "wouldn't cost the town anything but a yes vote at town meeting" was brought up by Lester Chisholm at last Thursday's meeting of the Affordable Housing Task Force.

Chisholm is proposing to rezone 24 acres of his mink farm on Hopkins Street from R60 to R10 at September's town meeting. This, he said, would allow the construction of 40 to 50 homes instead of the 13 allowed under R60.

Chisholm explained it's his intention to either donate 25 percent of the lots to the town for below market homes or to have the homes built and sell them himself for a lower price. He said his proposal would be along the lines of the Homeownership Opportunity program without state involvement or red tape.

Members raised several questions about the plans. When asked about an access road and a possible connection to the 774 condominium project proposed for the back of the same property, Chisholm said this proposal would provide another access road for the developer but he wasn't sure if it would be the sole exit for the back parcel.

Vaughn Surprenant asked if Chisholm would seek a comprehensive permit should residents vote against his article.

Chisholm replied he only plans "one day at a time" but added he was still mulling over the idea of starting a strawberry business if the proposal falls through.

When neighbor Linda Scifo brought up the question of condo development on that site she was told "that's always an option for a developer to pursue."

Rocco DePasquale joined Surprenant in seeking a compromise to tie the two proposals together and make it more palatable to neighbors, perhaps mixing single family homes with cluster type units. Developer Jay Tighe, who has an option on the back parcel, replied he wasn't interested.

Chairman Jim Stewart then cautioned Chisholm that voters are going to view the two parcels as one and they may have "difficulty looking at it otherwise." He asked that town counsel look at the legalities involved in requiring that 25 percent of the lots be affordable.

Other discussion centered around spot zoning, the extreme density of the condo and proposed single family developments, the cost of maintaining newly built roads in such developments, and the fact that R10 zoning wouldn't be possible without a sewer connection.

The ban is back

Wilmington is again under a water ban. The Wilmington Water Department has banned the outdoor use of water until further notice.

The ban was imposed last Wednesday, and remains in place in spite of rainfall that has occurred since then. The ban was declared because Burlington, facing its own shortage, had to stop supplying Wilmington with supplementary water, about a half-million gallons a day.

Supt. Paul Duggan said that the .96 of an inch of rain which fell last week, plus .34 of an inch early Tuesday has done little to ease the shortage.

"We've been doing a rain dance out here," joked Duggan, "but we don't know if we're supposed to face east or west."

The rainfall has hardly raised the water table. The town draws its water from groundwater in deep wells. Duggan said that the water table at this time is three to four feet below normal.

The ban prohibits the use sprinklers or hand-held hoses, either for watering lawns, shrubs or gardens, or for washing cars. Watering of gardens will be allowed only by use of watering cans.

The water shortage, of course, is due to the dry conditions of the summer. It is the second time this year that a ban has been imposed. In late May and early June, a ban was in effect. It was then modified to an odd-even basis, allowing watering every other day through most of the summer.

Land cataloguing nearly completed

by Arlene Surprenant

The cataloguing of town owned land is nearing completion, thanks to the hard work of planning board interns Anne Warner and Donald Nadeau.

In a preliminary report to the Affordable Housing Task Force Thursday, it was learned that of 670 documented parcels, 460 are vacant and 75 of those conform to current zoning. To date 106 parcels, some of which contain wetlands, have been inspected.

It was suggested Warner and Nadeau find out which of the lots are buildable and could be used for affordable housing. Proposals were made to have either a few developers or town department heads walk the sites and inspect them for such things as water, septic possibilities, and soil conditions. Members felt some of the smaller abutting parcels could be joined to create a large lot to meet their needs.

The land inventory is expected to be done by January to allow a review by selectmen and the planning board. The results will be brought to voters at April's town meeting.

In other business, former selectman Rocco DePasquale said he is still "vigorously pursuing" his plan to develop a large number of below market homes utilizing bond monies and a continual revolving fund. He plans to use the expertise of town departments, the housing authority, the task force, and a non-profit corporation to implement his idea. DePasquale said he had been speaking to some local developers who feel the project is feasible and he is now awaiting legal input on a number of questions which have arisen.

DePasquale told members he expects to have his proposal ready for the annual town meeting.

"I think it's something EOCD should pay attention to...I think it can be done," he added.

Confusion over a piece of property believed to be owned by Jim Newhouse but, in actuality, belonging to the town led the Wilmington Board of Selectmen Monday to call a second special town meeting. The meeting is slated for September 28, the same day as one previously scheduled.

Attorney Joe Courtney and developers Dick Stuart and Jim Newhouse made an emergency appearance before selectmen seeking their support for the town meeting. Courtney felt this was the best way to resolve the problem. He said he had already drawn up the only article expected to be on that warrant, an article which requests voters to convey the parcel to Newhouse.

The property in question, which is 30 feet wide and 100 feet deep, is located on Fay Street off Glen Road. A house built by Newhouse extends over four 30-foot lots, one of which is the parcel owned by the town. The conflict in ownership was discovered by a mortgaging attorney for prospective buyers who was attempting to clear title on the property. In the process, he uncovered the colorful history of the plot.

The parcel was originally owned by Josephine Cooney in the early 1940's then taken for unpaid taxes. It was acquired by John Cook, a former selectman and tax assessor, through a tax deed. The town again took the land, this time from Cook, in 1952. In the meantime, the land was bought by Francis Boruchi in 1951 who failed to register the deed until four years later. Though the land was in Boruchi's hands, legally the town retained ownership because of Boruchi's delay in recording the deed.

The land was then sold in 1969, in 1983, and finally in 1985 to Joe Langone and Dick Stuart, who sold it in 1986 to Newhouse.

Courtney called the whole situation "one of those legal nightmares that now and then happen."

Stuart told selectmen in researching the property they could find "no record that the town is aware that the town owns the property." The town, he said, believes Newhouse owns the property as he is listed as the owner of record. Taxes have continued to be paid on the parcel by the various owners over the years.

The "nightmare" worsened Monday as selectmen realized the moratorium on the sale of town owned land would have to be lifted before the property could be conveyed to Newhouse and everything had to be resolved Monday because of time constraints. After some discussion on legalities with Town Counsel Alan Altman, it was decided it was possible to lift the moratorium. The article, all agreed, would fit one of the three exemptions to the moratorium approved by voters last spring. The exemption allows for the lifting of the moratorium in the case of a home encroaching on town owned land. The owner of the abutting property could then buy that parcel.

Selectmen were concerned with the trend toward relying on their board and town meeting to resolve such problems when, in fact, the fault lay with "shoddy" legal work and not enough investigation before builders acquire a building permit.

Bob Doucette suggested developers be required to file a certified plot plan with the building inspector before being issued a permit to build. Jim Stewart suggested the onus be put back on the lawyers to make sure land is clear before construction begins.

The cases "keep coming and coming," said Doucette as selectmen agreed you can't vote "objectively" in a hardship case.

Legal problem

Builder Jim Newhouse had built this house and was in the process of selling it when he learned that it was partly on tax-title land. The part of the house to the left of the tree is on the town-owned land. Wilmington selectmen have called a second special town meeting for Sept. 28 to clear up the matter.

Septage disposal will cost Tewksbury

The cost of septage disposal from Tewksbury homes could triple in the near future, so said Public Health Director Bill McMenimen at the Tewksbury Board of Health meeting Monday night.

As of the first of September, Tewksbury sewage may no longer go to the Lawrence District sewer disposal facility, in North Andover. McMenimen told the board that he had called the office of that district, and had again been refused. He also called Haverhill, to see if Tewksbury septage could go to the disposal facility there, and the answer was again no.

There are two other possibilities. McMenimen said he has been in contact with the Wilmington Sewer and Water Commissioners, to see if Tewksbury septage could be dumped at the Wilmington facility. A letter was written to that board on August 11.

Chairman George Allan of the Wilmington sewer and water commissioners, in a letter written August 21 to Chairman Bob Rauseo of the Board of Health, said that approval will be needed from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) before Tewksbury can use the Wilmington facility.

An appointment has been made to meet with the Wilmington board on Thursday night, but the chances of agreement without MIRA approval are nil, McMenimen said. The entire board is expected to be present to meet with the Wilmington commissioners Thursday evening.

Since Tuesday morning, no home in Tewksbury has had septic system disposal service. If the Wilmington meeting on Thursday night is unproductive, Tewksbury will have one last opportunity -- with the Upper Blackstone Water Pollution Abatement District.

Health Board Chairman Bob Rauseo signed an agreement which had been prepared, Tuesday evening, so that if an agreement can be made service might possibly start as early as the 20th of September.

The Blackstone facility is in Millbury, just south of Worcester. McMenimen estimated a minimum of one hour travel time for Tewksbury trucks to reach that facility.

According to the agreement prepared by the Blackstone facility attorney, it has already received the MIRA approval to receive Tewksbury septage. The Tewksbury Board of Health will have to submit a plan showing that the septage will be delivered in specially equipped motor vehicles which comply with the board of health regulations and with the regulations of the City of Worcester.

Among other regulations in the agreement, the District will submit bills to the Tewksbury Board of Health monthly, and Tewksbury will pay those bills within 29 days. Tewksbury will not become a member of the Upper Blackstone District, nor will it acquire any rights of membership by virtue of the agreement.

The town and the district agree that the cost formula may be recalculated annually, dependent on the various cost factors, and, in order that Tewksbury's budget planning may be anticipated, the District will submit its anticipated costs for the next fiscal year by December 31 of the current year.

Blackstone, McMenimen told the board "does not want to deal with contractors." He estimates the costs to the town for using the Blackstone facility until next summer as being $35,000.

The Blackstone facility has a form, for trucks to use, which is in five parts (quintuplicate). Copies are for the trucker, the town, the householder, the state DEQE, and the Blackstone facility. The cost for the first 1000 gallons of septage is $35, and for 2,000 approximately $67.

McMenimen suggested, as a starter, that the board of health charge a trucker $75 for a 2,000 gallon load. The charge, he pointed out, can always be changed.

The cost for Tewksbury for the first 30 days is estimated by McMenimen at $4,000, with an $8,000 cost for two months.

A letter has been written to Joe Gill, chairman of the Finance Committee asking that a special meeting of the finance committee be called to discuss the funds for septage disposal.

A letter was also written to Sandy Barbeau, executive secretary to the Board of Selectmen, asking that there be an article in the warrant for the upcoming special town meeting to allow the town to transfer the sum of $35,000 to the board of health for septage disposal.

McMenimen is asking Tewksbury residents to report any suspicious activity by septic system pump trucks, due to the difficulties of septage disposal. If an instance of improper dumping is suspected, he said, residents should immediately contact the Tewksbury police.

PLANTAR WARTS AND LASER SURGERY

Laser Surgery is one of the newest and most significant applications of Laser Technology is the last two decades. Laser Surgery takes advantage of intense heat generating properties to cut and remove tissue while reducing many of the undesirable side effects that sometimes result from using a scalpel.

In our office we now use this Laser Technology in the removal of warts and other skin lesions of the foot. Warts to be removed are identified, anesthetized with local anesthesia and "lased" with short bursts of laser light. Not only is this treatment very effective, but post-operative discomfort and limitations are minimal.

It's YOUR Money

by Joyce Brisbois
Certified Public Accountant

WHEN RETIREES KEEP WORKING

When Social Security says you can retire, does it pay to keep working? Yes, say those who are bored to staying home, or who find they can use the extra money. Yes, say their satisfied employers. But Social Security puts workers in a tight bind: earn too much and your benefits are reduced; indeed, they may be taxed.

Rule Number 1: Social Security payments will be reduced $1 for every $2 you earn (after 1990, $1 for every $3 earned) over certain limits -- $6,000 for those under 65, $8,160 from 65 to 70. After 70, there are no earning limits. Neither dividends nor other unearned income count against you here.

However, earned and unearned income -- even tax-exempt interest -- are added up to determine the taxability of your benefits. If all income, plus half of your Social Security benefits, total $32,000 ($25,000 for individuals), half of your benefits will be taxable.

Planning for retirement? Let us help.

NOTICE WATER BAN

Effective immediately, a voluntary use ban on all outside use of water has been declared by the Water Department. No sprinklers or hand-held hoses shall be used for lawns, gardens, shrubs or cars. Watering of gardens will be permitted by use of watering cans only.

The ban is necessary because due to insufficient rainfall, the groundwater level has been lowered beyond the point of our pumping facilities being able to pump at full capacity.

Also, the emergency connection with our neighboring town has been terminated because of problems of their own.

Without this water ban, our storage tanks would be depleted, lowering the water pressure and reducing our reserve for fire protection. Therefore, the public health and safety of the town would be endangered.

The water ban will remain in effect until further notice. We ask the cooperation of all our water takers during this critical situation.

No opposition from concomm on site previously refused

Builder Jay Tighe will probably have to wait two months before he is able to start building homes on three lots near the old cranberry bog on Shawsheen Avenue in Wilmington.

After an on-site visit last Thursday, Jim Mahala of the Mass. Department of Environmental Quality Engineering said that it would take five or six weeks to wrap-up the case, and then there was a ten-day appeal period.

Tighe bought the old cranberry bog last year, and has begun building homes on land which is not in the bog itself.

Several of the lots, being near wetlands, have had to go through the process of a wetlands protection act hearing, run by the Wilmington Conservation Commission.

The land includes four lots along Shawsheen Avenue. Tighe built a home on one lot, but had to file for a wetlands protection act hearing on the other three.

That hearing was filed for on April 2, and held on May 20.

At the May 20 hearing, concomm member Joan Sadowski requested that the commission obtain certain information from an independent consultant.

After the hearing, concomm secretary Ella Belmore wrote a letter to IEP, Inc. requesting information. Only after the letter was sent was it seen by Conservation Administrator Libby Sabounjian.

On June 2, Belmore was fired by Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski. The minutes of the May 20 hearing had not been submitted before the firing, and have not ever been submitted. Belmore asks what the obligation is for a fired employee to respond to orders.

Complicating the matter, though, is the fact that the commission has voted Belmore as an "associate member" of the commission. There is no clarification as to the status of an associate member.

The commission requested and Tighe granted two extensions of time for deciding the matter. On June 24, the commission voted to deny the application.

At that meeting, Mrs. Sadowski said that the consultant had not answered all her questions.

Mrs. Sabounjian said that IEP had answered the question asked in the letter.

The IEP report basically backed up the report which had originally been submitted by Tighe's engineer, BSC consultants.

Concomm Chairman Chester Bruce said at that time that he was confused about the report and what had been requested. He asked Tighe for another extension, to straighten out the confusion.

Tighe refused to grant the extension.

The concomm then voted to deny the application, claiming that not enough information had been provided.

In its order of conditions for the denial, the commission stated three concerns, dictated by Mrs. Sadowski, relating to possible contamination of wetlands by septic systems or runoff.

In an interview, Mrs. Sabounjian said that denial is only in order if the applicant fails to provide information, but not if the commission or its consultant fails to provide information.

Tighe appealed the decision to the state DEQE. He also submitted a request for the minutes of the May 20 hearing. But since those minutes had never been submitted, the commission has been unable to provide them.

Subsequently, Tighe pressed the matter of the minutes through the assistant district attorney and the state Division of Public Records. These offices have informed the commission of the requirement of keeping and providing minutes. The matter has not yet been resolved.

Last Thursday, James Mahala of the DEQE held an on-site inspection. At that meeting, Bruce told Mahala that all his concerns had been satisfied. The commission apparently had no objection to granting the permit which had been denied two months earlier.

The question then came up of how long it would take to complete the paper work granting a favorable order of conditions.

Mahala said that it would take five or six weeks before he could finish the case.

Bruce offered that it might be quicker if Tighe were to withdraw his appeal and file a new application before the commission.

Tighe has decided to proceed with the appeal before the DEQE, rather than go before the commission.

He is anxious to proceed with the building, due to the circumstances surrounding one house. He agreed to build two homes for a particular family. One house has already been built and occupied but the second home is tied up with the case before the DEQE. It is a case where parents want to live next door to their daughter, and they are quite anxious to move into their new home.

Wilmington faculty has new faces

by Arlene Surprenant

Several new faculty faces will greet students when school doors open next Wednesday in Wilmington.

Seventeen professionals have been hired to fill vacant teaching and guidance positions. In addition, Michael Tikonoff of Burlington has been named new Wildwood School principal and James Jordan has moved from his acting capacity into a more permanent role as the West Intermediate principal.

Working at the elementary level will be Janet Senesi, Diane Flaherty, Susan Hendee, Betty Frazee, and Julie Romanelli. Senesi, a graduate of Salem State, will teach at the Woburn Street School while Flaherty brings her expertise as a teacher to the Shawsheen School. Hendee has been hired as a physical education instructor in all three primary schools.

Frazee will assume teaching duties in the Special Education Resource Room at the Shawsheen School. She holds both a B.S. and a Masters Degree in her field and is backed by 17 years experience. Romanelli will take over as guidance counselor at the same school.

Martha Rickley, Randy MacDougall, Karen Cazoli, Michael Michalski, Pearl Rosofsky, and Deborah Stoelzel will fill various positions at the intermediate level.

Rickley and MacDougall, both graduates of Salem State, have been assigned sixth grade positions at the West Intermediate. Michalski will join them as computer teacher at the same school. He holds a B.S. from Boston University.

Cazoli will be the new science/health instructor at both intermediate schools. At the North, Rosofsky will take over as art teacher while Stoelzel will join the staff as a teacher in the Special Education

Resource Room.

Doreen Thibault, Diane Lee, Marie Shack, and Michael Moresco will assume duties at Wilmington High.

Thibault completed her education at the University of Lowell and will teach mathematics. Lee will offer instruction in photography and art while Shack, who holds a Masters from the College of Art in Massachusetts, will teach art on a part time basis. Moresco is the newest addition to the guidance department. He holds a B.A. from Boston College and a Masters of Education diploma from the University of Massachusetts.

Ward Dilmore comes well prepared to take over as a music teacher specializing in string instruments. He will redevelop Wilmington's string program throughout the system.

A graduate of both Radcliffe College and Harvard University, Ellen Cooney will assume duties as a half time school adjustment counselor throughout the Wilmington system.

On-site meeting

An on site consultation will be held by MEPA concerning the Environmental Notification Form filed for the 774 condominium project known as Shawsheen River Estates.

Interested residents are invited to join a MEPA representative and town officials at the Reed Street cul de sac next Wednesday, September 9 at 10 a.m. to discuss the proposal and its environmental impact.

Frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowryda

It's not a happy day for this community when you ride by number Ten Church Street and see that Dr. Mobbs' quaint brick office building is up for sale. Having been a most respected physician in Wilmington since 1963, Dr. Robert F. Mobbs is planning to sell his practice due to ill health. But in an interview with the Town Crier, Dr. Mobbs was far from giving the impression of a man who is sick, but instead one who is as sharp as a nail, and who can be proud of some monumental accomplishments at both the state and national levels - all for the sake of a safer environment.

Completing his undergraduate work at Tufts University, and then receiving his medical degree from Boston University, Mobbs served in both the Navy and the Army. And it was in 1948, that Robert F. Mobbs, M.D. found his true interest in medicine. This was researching the many cancer causing agents that people were being exposed to in every day life, and in fact still are. It was in this late part of the 1940's that Mobbs wrote a blockbuster report in the Journal of the American Medical Association on the carcinogenic chemical DDT. Today, this chemical is widely known and reported on. But back in 1949 Mobbs was walking a tightrope by suggesting the danger of the substance, and that it caused cancer in rabbits which he had experimented with. As Mobbs looked back on this report, which started his crusade against dangerous chemicals, he said "There were many things, pesticides, herbicides, and organic solvents, that needed to be carefully evaluated for toxicity."

A sort of historical side-note to the climactic report on DDT was the effect it had on a then young and fresh newspaper reporter. When Mobbs' report on the dangers of DDT came out, a southern reporter wrote a story on the subject, and immediately thereafter was fired, supposedly for giving coverage to what at the time was regarded as outrageous. That reporter was none other than Tom Wicker, who is today the political columnist for the New York Times.

But unlike Tom Wicker, there were other reporters who managed to give Mobbs' report coverage without penalty. The first of these was a reporter from the Durham Herald, in North Carolina. The Herald's report came out in 1949, and according to Dr. Mobbs was subsequently carried by the Associated Press. Mobbs looks back on the event as the great public relations break-through on the effects of DDT, as he had reported them in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Mobbs' involvement with chemicals now focused on getting the government involved. In 1953, he testified before a congressional-committee and was successful in pushing for the Delaney Amendment. The Delaney Amendment stated that things known to cause cancer must be kept to a zero level in all food products. Mobbs tried to have tobacco considered as cancer causing here, but was unsuccessful. It was because of this legislation that the 1959 cranberry crop was stopped in Massachusetts since the pesticides used had been found to cause cancer in animals.

In the 1960's Mobbs continued his efforts to have the federal and state governments take a more active role in monitoring dangerous chemical substances. Mobbs' cousin Charles Rouche had been Bobby Kennedy's roommate at Harvard, and went on to be deputy chairman of the national Democratic party. Through his cousin Charles, Mobbs urged President Kennedy to take a close look at toxicity research, which Mobbs says is still sadly minimal at most universities today.

It was in 1972 that Dr. Mobbs did something which is probably the greatest of his many accomplishments, and directly felt by all of us today. As a member of the Massachusetts Pesticide Board, Mobbs organized an effort to have national legislation passed allowing states to be stricter than the federal government on the regulation of chemicals. Mobbs brought the congressional delegation into the effort, and was successful in his quest. Consequently, both Massachusetts and Florida were able to ban the chemical ethylene dibromide. And today, thanks to Mobbs' efforts, Massachusetts has banned the use of chlordane as an agent for termite control.

With all his activities, Mobbs still found the time to be outspoken on chemical dangers right here at home. Mobbs humorously recalled his last encounter with Monsanto, the company which was linked to a chemical waste dump in the town of Woburn. Dr. Mobbs said he called the public relations director of Monsanto, and said, "The way I figure it people who leave cancer causing chemicals should clean them up, and if not I will offer a thousand dollars for every person in Massachusetts who can be found not to have some cancer causing chemical from Monsanto." Interestingly enough, Monsanto has never taken Mobbs up on his offer.

Now at home in Andover, Dr. Mobbs is still concerned with the government regulation of chemicals, and spoke disdainfully of recent efforts by U.S. Senator Jesse Helms to nullify the right of a state to be stricter than the federal government on chemical regulation, a right for which Mobbs had fought so hard in 1972. But one gets the feeling that there are enough politicians and doctors who have had the pleasure to work with Mobbs over the years, to keep his many accomplishments intact. And despite illness, Dr. Mobbs continues to study the toxicity of chemicals, and how we can be better protected from hazardous substances like DDT.

By BRUCE N. MORANG

Regardless of where you stand in the mushrooming controversy surrounding the Seabrook nuclear power plant, be advised ambivalence will do you no good.

You (and the rest of us) already owe too much, and are too inextricably woven into the fabric of that seaside New Hampshire mess to feel anything but ambivalent about Seabrook, and what Seabrook really symbolizes — the very uncertain future of electric power in New England.

Conceived in 1970 at a projected cost of $700 million, the Seabrook nuclear power station has been under construction and under siege of protest for 15 years. That construction-price tag is now $4.8 billion.

And every dime of that ridiculous $4.8 billion is owed, a mortgage that will impact this and the next several generations of electric power consumers in New England.

Here, with it's garrish Catch 22 and Parkinsonian overtones, is where we stand with Seabrook at this hour:

—Public Service of New Hampshire, principal (just over 40 percent) owner of Seabrook, is appealing to anyone that will listen for permission to circumvent the law and begin

Seabrook: The high cost of ambivalence charging its customers prorated shares of their $2 billion debt. Without such a new cash flow, Public Service says it may have to file for bankruptcy protection.

—The federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission said this week that the desperate financial situation faced by Public Service may preclude the NRC from licensing Seabrook for low-level test operations. The NRC wants proof Public Service can sustain such operations financially and without sacrificing safety procedures.

—Disputing the NRC's opinions, the 12-utility consortium that makes up the balance of Seabrook ownership says there would be "no problem" in getting together funds to sustain Seabrook through low-level testing. That 12-utility consortium includes the Massachusetts Municipal Wholesale Electric Corp. (MMWEC), dues-paying membership in which includes the Reading and Wakefield municipal light departments. MMWEC owns 11.6 percent of Seabrook; and thus Reading and Wakefield rate payers "own" a pro-rated 11.6 percent of Seabrook's debt and debt service.

Want more? —Gov. Michael Dukakis has refused to accept people evacuation plans submitted by Seabrook for the Massachusetts border towns within the 10-mile so-called "emergency zone" of Seabrook. Seabrook has responded by offering annual stipends of $500 each for 875 Seabrook employees, employees who would be used to direct and superintend such an evacuation. That would cost Seabrook $437,000 annually. Add that to your electric bill.

What all of this boils out to was dramatically highlighted two weeks ago when the area was in the grips of a relatively mild, and blessedly brief heat wave. The heavy use of air conditioners threatened to overtax New England utilities' ability to produce enough power, and 5 percent voltage reductions were ordered for most of the six state region. "Rolling blackouts" were threatened in New Hampshire and parts of Maine. And the consensus of utility friends and foes alike: poor planning led to the crisis.

Consensus also is that as much as 25 percent of New England's power producing capacity was shut down for "maintenance" during that brief hot spell. New England's governors, legislators, and most of the region's utility consortium have seen such crises coming, but have done little about it.

Things such as utility maintenance and planning takes money. Lots of money. But with a total of $4.8 billion tied up in the Seabrook impasse, you have to wonder where the next maintenance and planning dollars are coming from.

So it is that the sad litaney of stubborn investors and stubborn protestors, myopic utility management and a hapless public, goes on and on.

Dr. Northcote Parkinson must have devised a law to cover such a dilemma. Or maybe all of Parkinson's Laws should be invoked.

The Humble Farmer Elementary observations

When I entered Gramp Wiley's trailer he snapped his book shut and tried to slide it under the cushions in his stuffed rocking chair. The title, printed in gold, said, "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes."

"Congratulations, that's great news," Gramp said without looking up. "I'm glad for you."

"You amaze me, Gramp. How did you know I had good news?"

"Elementary - any man your age with a gut that sags like yours has trouble coming up my three porch steps without stopping to pant for breath. You've bounced in here like an eighth grade girl heading out for a cigarette at recess time."

Gramp folded his hands and looked up for the first time before modestly continuing, "What else could you be bearing but good news?"

"You're right as usual. I have a big-paying job playing bass tonight with the Frank Tweed Orchestra. I'm getting 60 bucks." I confided in a low voice.

"Have you checked the international money market in Zurich yet?"

"What do you mean?" Gramp said, "Investing that kind of money in this country would cause chaos in the money market. Interest rates would plummet. But nobody knows who invests big money in Switzerland - until the news is extracted from witnesses during congressional hearings."

"How can you possibly know so much about people and the peculiar things they do, Gramp? I cried. "I've never seen a topic that could stop you."

My old neighbor shrugged his shoulders. "Deduction is a science which I have perfected, of which the detection of excitement in your footsteps is but an elementary example. It is by a man's finger nails, by his clothing, by the car he drives that his occupation is plainly revealed."

"If anyone can do it you can," I cried. Then, like a child eager to see the rabbit appear from the magician's hat, I clapped my hands and added, "Give me some examples."

Gramp folded his arms across his chest, shut his eyes, and sank back into the cushions in his rocker. After several seconds he said, "Men with fallen arches and blue bags under their eyes who drive five-year-old gray Cadillacs sell mattresses. It's always the model produced just after the one with the tail fins," he mused.

"Less poetry and more fact," I begged.

"Life insurance salesmen wear a pained expression on their faces.

They're constantly under pressure to explain why their premiums only go up while the benefits in their policies always go down.

"Psychologists look bewildered and confused. They dress in disheveled tweed, bite their fingernails and have nasty yellow nicotine stains on their fingers."

"You've described a real estate salesman, Gramp. You're off base on that one."

My venerable neighbor didn't even look up but quietly observed, "Real estate people dress in the uniform of the profession they were last in. Ninety-five percent of them aren't in real estate long enough to develop any distinctive style."

I knew he had me there and my cheeks flushed with shame.

"Trappers," Gramp continued, "you can tell in the dark."

"Automobile mechanics? By their greasy footprints. Never rent a house to one of them unless you plan to burn it down after they leave."

"Butchers wear neckties that are slightly frayed."

"From sliding them onto the scales when they weigh your meat," I excitedly exclaimed.

Gramp Wiley looked pleased as he continued, "School superintendents have 1955 State Department of Education regulation haircuts. Grey now, of course, but what remains is still flat on the top. Folks with axes..."

"Wood choppers," I shouted.

"...That need grinding are school board members," Gramp continued.

"Then we get down to finer distinctions. A tiny flake of gold under a fingernail could only be found on the hand of a TV preacher."

"From their bathroom faucets. Brilliant," I cried as I clapped my hands.

"Small grass clippings on pantlegs are not the reliable indicators they once were years ago. Now, you know, you could be looking at the village idiot or a school teacher who is forced to mow lawns all summer simply to make ends meet. When in doubt, the one who is not smiling is usually the teacher."

"I've heard enough," I said. "There's no question but what you've advanced the art of deduction far beyond anything dreamed of by Sherlock Holmes."

Gramp Wiley nodded and patted the book beneath the cushions. "I'll read a bit more about him this afternoon if I can find my glasses."

The September 6, 1962 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

"Tax bills totaling $1,872,174.07 were scheduled to be sent out based on 100 percent valuation, the first time real estate of Wilmington was so taxed."

Labor Day weekend was accident free in Wilmington.

Suppliers Automotive Parts, formerly of Main Street opened at 4 Middlesex Avenue with Ralph Medbery as manager.

Capt John Regan, US Air Force chaplain and former curate of St. Thomas, visiting from Lackland Airforce Base, dropped into the Crier for a visit.

Twenty-one men took part in the Wilmington-Tewksbury Jaycees sponsored exercise of giving coffee to tired motorists traveling Route 93 over the holiday weekend in Wilmington.

Wilmington men included Dave Fillio, Bill MacKinnon, Marty Lesnik, George Quinn, Paul Doerfler, Lloyd Bender, Charles Burt, George Lingenfelder, Ted Johnson and Milt Bradford.

Those from Tewksbury were Art Casato, Art Chaff, Alan Hunter, Gerald Hurley, Joe Duffina, Earle Young, Norman Gay, Ed Adams, Bruce Carpenter and Paul Trembley.

Governor John Volpe, on a tour of inspection stopped for a cup of coffee as did Frank Giles, Mass. Commissioner of Public Safety.

Sweetheart Plastics, one of the newer firms in Wilmington was awarded a $500,000 contract to supply 45,000,000 plastic Guildware cups and lids to the Office of the Civil Defense of the U.S. Government. The cups would be sent to the National Association of the Blind where they would be assembled into survival kits for the nation's fallout shelter program. This was the initial government contract for Sweetheart (formerly Guild).

Major Frank Nigro of Oakdale Road and Ralph Decker of Lawrence Street returned home from a two week training period with the Air National Guard during which they took part in operation "Long Haul" with the 253rd Communications Group and the 267th Communication group of Wellesley.

Barbara Smith of Faulkner Avenue and Irene Ross of Main Street just returned home from a motor trip to Virginia Beach.

William Hall of Woburn Street, lifeguard for the past several summers at Silver Lake Beach, was awarded a one year teaching fellowship at the University of Illinois. He would be a teacher of Russian while working for his masters degree.

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

Ethics is defined as the discipline dealing with what is good and bad, with moral duty and obligation; a theory or system of moral values; the principles of conduct of governing an individual or group.

Should understanding the concept of ethics and being able to put the theory into practice be required of those filling appointed positions?

The current zoning bylaws could also be called the locally accepted standard. This group of standards could be used to help us protect this community. Should you want to undertake a project you must meet these standards.

The town of Tewksbury is different. The standard, as stated, and the practice of application are on opposite ends of the pole.

It is known by most adults in town that Tewksbury has a minimum lot size of one acre. Therefore why would anyone buy a lot not meeting that accepted standard? But that's not a problem in Tewksbury. Should you need to reinforce that comment - just sit in on a zoning board of appeals hearing.

It is very easy to lower the standards of a town. So you need some quick money - buy land anyplace, preferably on Rt. 38; hold it for a year and when you are approached by a fist full of dollars sign on the dotted line with no regard for neighborhood impact - esthetics, facility need or abuse of standards. The appeals board will probably grant you a variance. After all, as I was told at the Monday night hearing, if someone pays taxes on a piece of land they should be able to develop it. I disagree because if the individual were ethical or principled and upheld the standard of practice these petitions would not be submitted.

Now is the time to enforce the zoning bylaws - appoint those who will protect them. This was once a nice rural community it is quickly taking on the paved appearance of the area around Boston - Chelsea, Somerville, Watertown - a cement ghetto - no grass and always a building in sight.

Appointing builders, real estate agents, their relatives and the like is a blatant ethical conflict of interest. The sensitive issue or under the table favors is too close for comfort.

The only way to stop this is to get the builders in this town out of the politics of this town now and next April - before all the swamps have been moved and the chipmunks are flat in the streets. Aren't you tired of the Good Old Boy - knee pad mentality? Where is the State Ethics Commission when you need it?

Sincerely,
Cyndee Carson

Dear Governor Dukakis:

Re: Chapter 774

All special interest laws, by definition, cannot answer all conditions all the time. 774 is a special interest law.

Let us carry this law to its utmost. All the swamps (contrary to the Wetlands Bill) have been filled in and built on; all the rocky ground has been blasted and built on; there is no land, good or bad, left. The town still has not met the quota as defined in 774. Now, what do we do? Tear down single family homes to make room for apartment homes?

774 should be revised or revoked before this idiosyncrasy goes too far. My water already looks, smells, and tastes bad.

Sincerely yours,
Harry N. Atamian

After-school program to serve Wilmington students

Starting Wednesday, September 9 the Billerica Boys Club, in cooperation with the Wilmington Public Schools, will run a Fun Club program for Wilmington elementary aged children. Children can attend from the end of the school day until as late as 6 p.m. During these after school hours the youngsters will enjoy a wide variety of activities including: arts and crafts, playground and gym games, homework, puzzles, board games, theater and puppetry, music and movement, and cooking, all under the direct supervision of a professionally qualified staff.

The program is an extension of one already existing in the town of Billerica. During the 1986-87 school year the Billerica Fun Club served approximately 70 children a day at centrally located sites.

The program is designed to meet the needs of single and working parent families. It is an affordable alternative to leaving children home unattended for those after-school hours, as well as enhancing their social, physical, and emotional growth. Between the Fun Club Program and the Summer Day Camp, the Billerica Boys Club is able to offer year round, affordable, childcare for school-aged youngsters.

The Wilmington Fun Club will be open to any child who attends a Wilmington Elementary School. It will be held at the Woburn Street School and children from the Shawsheen and Wildwood Schools will be bussed to the site. Cost for a full week (five days) is $30 or children may attend part time (four or less days) for $7 a day. In addition to the weekly fee, there is a registration fee of $10 to be paid upon enrollment.

Children six years and older must also be members of the Billerica Boys Club, membership is $6 per year and entitles children to all the programs the club offers.

Discounts are available for families with two or more children attending the program, the second and additional children may go for $25 a week.

In addition to afterschool hours, the program will also be held on vacation, early release and snow days. During school vacations the program will be held at the Woburn Street School from 7:30 a.m. until 6 p.m. at a cost of $15 per day. Coverage for snow days is available at the Billerica Boys Club. A site for unscheduled early release days (days when school is dismissed early due to inclement weather) is in the process of being arranged.

Registration for the Fun Club Program will be held Thursday, September 3 in the main lobby of the Wilmington High School from 6 p.m. until 8:30 p.m.

Registrations are also being accepted at the Billerica Boys Club Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

The program is open to children at all grade levels. Kindergarten-aged children are welcome but coverage is not available until the end of the school day (2:55 p.m.).

Questions regarding the Fun Club, Boys Club, or Summer Day Camp programs should be directed to 667-2193. Fun Club questions should be directed to Lori Harries, program coordinator.

Scholarships awarded to two Wilmington residents

Two Wilmington residents have received scholarships from the Dr. Thomas P. and Edwina H. Devlin Memorial Scholarship Fund. Dr. David Londo and Tracy Russo were among nine students to share a total of $6000 in medical and nursing scholarships awarded on August 19.

Dr. Londo is a resident of Grove Avenue. He is a graduate of the University of California, San Diego and concurrently received a D.D.S. degree from UCLA School of Dentistry and an M.S. in Oral Biology UCLA Graduate Division. His work there included extensive research in biochemistry and molecular genetics.

Dr. Londo is currently chief resident in the Oral and Maxillofacial

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Colella

Nancy Miano weds Vincent Colella

Nancy Miano and Vincent Colella were married May 31, 1987 by Father Michael Kearney at St. Thomas of Villanova Church in Wilmington.

The bride, who was given away by her father, Richard Miano, wore a gown designed and created by Nicki's of East Boston. Her gown made of imported French lace and silk taffeta, trimmed with pearls and crystals was worn off the shoulders. A wreath of lace and beads with a cathedral veil was worn as her headpiece. She carried a bouquet made of exotic flowers.

She was attended by her sister as maid of honor Elizabeth Miano along with bridesmaids Lisa Pasciuto, Joanne Folsom, Janet Engrem, Pamela Marasco and her flower girl Sara Marasco.

The groom was attended by best man Steven Mazzola and ushers Kevin Surrette, Kenneth Colella, Ronald Colella and John Buczynski.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Miano of Wilmington is a graduate of Wilmington High School and Middlesex Community College. She is employed by Woburn Medical Associates.

Her husband, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Colella, Jr. also of Wilmington, is a graduate of Wilmington High School and CPI of Woburn. He is currently employed by Data Care of Burlington.

The reception following the ceremony was held at the Hillview Country Club, North Reading.

The couple honeymooned throughout Europe.

TeriLyn Durling is bride

TeriLyn Durling, daughter of Sandra and Arthur Durling of 161 Woburn Street, Andover (formerly of Wilmington) became the bride of Stephen Chuha, Jr., son of Steven and Joan Chuha of Malden on April 25.

The Rev. Andrew Hamersley performed the 10:30 a.m. ceremony before the altar of the Church of Christ in Andover. Organist Earl Miller and vocalist Susan Youngbluth of Los Angeles, cousin of the bride enhanced the ceremony with appropriate musical renditions.

Judy Nee of Wilmington served as maid of honor while the bridesmaids were Kristi and Diane Chuha, sisters of the groom, both of Malden, Kris Walsh of Chevy Chase, Md. and Karen English of Lexington, a cousin of the bride.

Tom Boyce of Malden served as best man while ushering duties were in charge of David Chuha of Malden brother of the groom, Bob Brown of Malden, a close friend of the groom, Ray and Craig Durling of Andover, brothers of the bride.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride was radiant in a victorian style gown of luxurious satin with long, tapered sleeves and high neckline. Her fitted bodice was adorned with iridescent sequins as was the lace trim of the cathedral length gown. Her headpiece was a band of crystals with a pouf of veiling extending the length of the train. She carried a bouquet of cascading ivy, white roses and lillies of the valley.

The bride's attendants wore full length turquoise gowns with a petal hemline and carried nosegays of pink and peach roses.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the Royal Sonesta Hotel, Cambridge, grand ballroom where Sue Gracia of Wilmington circulated the guest book.

Following a wedding trip to the Hawaiian Islands, the couple is now living in Reading.

The new Mrs. Chuha is a 1980 graduate of Wilmington High School and graduated from Dean Junior College with the Class of 1982. She is currently employed by Latham & Lathan PC of Reading.

Her husband is principal of Bond Realty of Malden and Reading.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Chuha, Jr.

An automotive oil change service on Main Street was approved by the Tewksbury Board of Appeals this week after a continuation of earlier public hearings.

Last week's meeting of the zoning board of appeals was postponed due to the length of the agenda. The meeting on Monday night took up where the agenda was halted.

Board member Lou Carciofi filed requests for variances for the oil change service, to be located on 734 Main Street, across from Friendly restaurant.

The lot, measuring just under 30,000 square feet in area, was proposed as the site of an oil quick-change service. Carciofi sought variances from the acre zoning requirement, the 150-foot minimum frontage by-law and asked for a special use permit for the operation.

Presenting Carciofi's case to the appeals board was Lowell attorney Kevin Gaffney, brother of appeals board member Charles Gaffney. Carciofi and Gaffney both excluded themselves from the proceeding, and Carciofi left the room.

After questions by the board over noise, traffic and the removal of used oil from the site, the hearing was opened to the public.

Speaking in favor of the proposal was George Piccardo, from the Mobil station on Main Street. His service station is so busy doing auto repairs, he said, that customers have trouble getting their oil changed.

Speaking against the proposal was Cyndee Carson, who does not live near the Main Street property but argued against the proposal on the grounds that the service station would have a negative impact on the neighborhood, and that the by-laws should not be waived.

"I find this a total disregard of the zoning by-laws," Carson said.

Appeals Board Chairman Peter Downing told her that land owners have a right to use their property.

"If you own a piece of property, if it's a big piece or a small piece, you have a right to make the best use of that property," Downing told her.

"There's nothing wrong with trees," Carson replied.

After the hearing was closed, the board voted four to one to approve the oil change proposal, with four conditions imposed.

The board ordered that there will be a 6-foot stockade fence to shield the site from the neighbor's land; no gasoline may be stored or sold on the premises; no steam cleaning of engines will be allowed; and the project must undergo site plan review before the planning board.

Tewksbury Neighbors & Newcomers Club

The Tewksbury Neighbors and Newcomers Club would like to invite all residents of the town of Tewksbury to join the club.

The main object of the club is for old and new residents of the town to get together for the purpose of friendship and to offer activities for women and their families to participate in. The club is involved in civic and charitable events, but also offer an exciting variety of programs for all members.

Also included are social programs such as pot luck suppers, bowling, childrens x-mass party, dances, ice skating and much more. The interest groups are geared for all individuals such as arts and crafts, childrens playgroup, whist, tennis, luncheon group, and coupon swap. If you would like more information on the club call Donna at 851-4874, or Trisha 657-6375.

Muscular Dystrophy telethon

For many people, Labor Day means the Jerry Lewis Telethon for Muscular Dystrophy. In Tewksbury and Wilmington, a few years ago, local firefighters ran a fun day and phone pledge center.

That effort has been dissolved. Renovations at the Oakdale Mall eliminated a site for the carnival, and volunteers have been unable to secure another site.

Restructuring and cost studies within the Muscular Dystrophy Association has eliminated several phone centers. Local pledges will be phoned to the Lowell pledge center at 452-3773.

Some local volunteers will be working in Lowell at Market Mills. A kids' fair and bazaar is scheduled to operate there during the weekend.

Choate/Symmes Health Fair

The Community is invited to join employees of the Middlesex Essex General Mail Facility for a comprehensive Health Fair Sunday, September 13 from 1 to 5 p.m. at the U.S. Postal Services, 462 Washington Street, Woburn.

The fair is presented in conjunction with Choate/Symmes Health Services. Members of the hospitals' medical and professional staff will conduct the screening. Seven are free to participants. These include: breast cancer screening offered by a Woburn surgeon on the Choate staff; dentistry and oral cancer screening by a staff oral surgeon; eye exam by a choate ophthalmologist; foot screening by a local staff podiatrist; blood pressure testing by a registered nurse; pulmonary functions testing by a registered respiratory therapist; blood sugar test, an on-the-spot reading to identify potential diabetes patients.

In addition to the screenings, educational materials on health-related issues will be available. Pre-registration is encouraged. Please call 646-1500, x 1441.

The Crafters, Ltd.

The Crafters, Ltd. will hold its first monthly meeting of the 1987-88 year on September 10. The meeting will be held at the Carrige House, Adams Library, Chelmsford, beginning at 7:30 p.m. Martha Ritz, the featured speaker for the evening, will explain "Scherenschnitte," which is paper-cutting. This technique, which is currently undergoing a resurgence, is really an ancient art form. The public is invited to attend this and other general meetings of the organization. Membership in The Crafters, Ltd. is open to all levels of crafters and also to those who are craft lovers. For membership information, call Marie at 256-2672.

The Shop of the Crafters will open its fifth year on September 8 at 92 Chelmsford Street (next to Town Meeting Restaurant). This co-operative show will feature high quality crafts ranging from florals and fabric to wood and jewelry. Participants are still being accepted and those interested should call Jean at 486-8870.

Merrimack Valley Chorale

Wilmington Police Dept. has three new officers

David Axelrod

Three men have been appointed as full-time police officers in Wilmington. They have been put on "permanent intermittent" status, pending permanent appointment.

Lawrence Juergens of Glen Road, David Axelrod of Thurston Avenue and Paul W. Jepson of Woburn Street are starting work this week. Juergens put in his first day on Tuesday, Jepson on Wednesday and Axelrod is scheduled to begin work on Thursday. They are then to start at the Mass. State Police Academy in Framingham on Sept. 14.

Juergens is a former member of the Shawshen Tech School Committee. He has been employed as a security guard at Zayre in North Reading. As a Boy Scout, he achieved the rank of Eagle Scout.

Axelrod, a native of Lawrence, taught in the Andover School system for five years. He has served as deputy tax collector for the town, and is a constable. He has worked as a process server for many years.

Paul Jepson is the brother of Mark Jepson, who has been a detective on the department for several years. Paul has been a member of the auxiliary police for more than three years, and has been employed at Aveco as a security guard during that same period.

Wilmington police news

During the week ending September 1, Wilmington police officers responded to 16 accidents, 20 alarms, six fires, 13 disturbances, made 13 arrests and two protective custody detentions and assisted other departments.

Three larcenies were investigated, medical assistance was rendered four times, one vehicle was reported stolen and three stolen vehicles were recovered.

Eight incidents of suspicious activity were reported, one assault and battery was investigated along with a break and entry and two domestic problems were quieted.

One liquor related complaint was logged along with two trespassing complaints, two involving traffic and five complaints involving trailbikes and 10 incidents of vandalism are still under investigation.

Arrests

Tuesday evening shortly before six, a husband and wife were arrested on narcotics charges after Wilmington officers served a search warrant at their home. Paul, 43 and Nancy, 48, Cronin of Andover Street, Wilmington were charged with illegally cultivating

Dogs in pound

The Wilmington dog officer is presently holding the following dogs at the dog pound:

Male mixed breed, golden color with white stripe on forehead, long hair, green nylon collar, picked up Aug. 28 on Marjorie Road.

Female German Shepherd, black and tan, no collar, picked up Sept. 1 on Dorchester Street.

Also, the dog officer is holding a male Siamese cat, lilac point, found Aug. 31 near Columbia Street.

The Wilmington dog officer may be reached by calling 658-7845.

marijuana, a class D controlled substance.

The search warrant was obtained at Woburn District Court by Insp. Jepson. Assisting with the seizure were Sgt. Shepard, Insp. McKenna and officers Waterhouse and Hanlon.

Officer Jim White arrested Joey Ryan, 20 of Aldrich Road, Wilmington, Wednesday, on the basis of warrants issued by Billerica and state police.

Early Thursday morning four people were arrested on liquor-related charges by Officer Tom Miller, Richard Frederickson, 18, of Sharon Street, Tewksbury and Bradford Smart, 17 of Davis Road, Tewksbury, along with two juvenile females. They were all charged with being minors in possession of alcohol.

Also arrested Thursday morning was Francis Shea, 20 of Carmel Street, Wilmington. Officer Frank Hancock made the arrest after a license check revealed that Shea's license was under suspension. He was held for court in the morning.

A local man was arrested Thursday afternoon by Sgt. Herbert Peterson on motor vehicle charges. Ralph Greenleaf, 58, of Grove Avenue, was charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol. He was bailed for an appearance in Woburn Court Monday morning.

Officer Steve Mauriello arrested Harold Crowell, Jr. 17, and Richard Stanton, 18, both of 25 So. Rhoda St., Tewksbury, Thursday evening. The pair was charged with possession of a class D substance believed to be marijuana.

Sunday morning a Quincy man was arrested in Bourne near Cape Cod by state police on the basis of a Wilmington warrant. He was transported to Woburn where he was picked up by Wilmington officers for booking. Mark Maynard, 55 Speare St., Quincy was held on a Woburn Court default warrant charging him with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol.

Later on Sunday Officer Steve LaRivee arrested a Boston man after a computer check revealed an outstanding warrant issued by state police in Yarmouth. Michael Erroibino, of Bennington Street, E. Boston was bailed and was scheduled to appear in Barnstable Court on Monday.

Monday afternoon Officer Chris Neville arrested a New Hampshire man on Route 93 after a traffic stop. Brian Colley of Elm Street, Apt. 105, Hudson was charged with operating after his license was suspended, speeding and failing to drive within marked lanes. He was bailed on $250 cash bail for an appearance in Woburn Court Tuesday morning.

Wilmington senior topics

Social, September 23

The Council on Aging September therapeutic social will be held at the Tewksbury - Wilmington Elks Hall Wednesday evening, September 23. A roast beef dinner with all the trimmings will be served at seven. Music for dancing will be provided by Jimmy Blute. Jimmy played at the seniors' picnic last Wednesday, to the pleasure of those attending and the dance floor at the Senior Center was well used.

Please sign up early as we have to finalize the number attending by September 9. If you have not signed up by that date, you will have to go on a waiting list. A $3 non-refundable deposit will be required when you sign up.

Hot lunch program

The fall hot lunch program will resume at the opening of school, September 9. The meals for this year will be served at the high school at 11:15 a.m. We feel more of our seniors will be able to partake of the meal. With the high school within walking distance of many of our seniors and a nice walk for those coming to the Senior Center. At the high school the seniors will be able to have a choice of a salad dinner or a hot meal.

At the West Intermediate School there was only one meal served. Please do not go to the school for a meal if you have not called or signed for one at the Center.

Council meets September 14

The Council on Aging meeting will not be held the first Monday of September due to Labor Day. The Center will be closed. The minibuses will not be on the road so please make appointments accordingly. The meeting will be held the following Monday, September 14. At this meeting the Council has invited Town Manager Buzz Stapeczynski to speak. We are continually being asked questions on the town in general. These questions, we cannot answer.

The town manager has agreed to answer as many questions as he can or refer you to the department or person who will be able to answer them for you. It would be a good idea to have your questions ready by writing them down before coming to the meeting. In this way, you will not forget what you want to ask.

Please try to attend this meeting. Even though the town manager has a busy schedule, he understands the seniors are not able to attend all the meetings held in the town. He is only too happy to come to where the seniors meet, the Buzzell Senior Citizen Center. Let us all let him know how much we appreciate his giving us this time.

Don't forget, if you wish to have Abbie give you the risk-assessment tests, you will have to call her for an appointment. Remember you have to fast before she can give you all five tests.

PLANNING BOARD NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

In accordance with the provisions of Chapter 40A, Section 5, M.G.L., the Planning Board will hold a public hearing on Tuesday, September 15, 1987 at 7:30 PM in the Town Hall Auditorium, 121 Glen Road, on certain zoning articles to appear in the Warrant for the Special Town Meeting.

Article 4: To see if the Town will vote to amend Section 6.3.2.1 of the Zoning Bylaw of the Town of Wilmington by deleting in its entirety and substituting thereof the following:

"All signs not located on the same premises as the advertised activity are prohibited as well as signs on utility poles, trees or fences and all billboards; except an off-premises identification or directional sign designating the presence or location of a recognized religious sect or denomination and except an off-premises directional sign designating the route to a specific recognized industrial center not on the street to which the sign is located may be erected and maintained within the public and right-of-way at any intersection or on private property by special permit from the Board of Appeals. Such special permit shall be granted only upon the determination that such sign will promote the public interest, will not endanger the public safety, and will be of such size, location and design as will not be detrimental to the neighborhood. All such directional signs shall be unlighted and each shall be not over five square feet in area."

or do anything in relation thereto.

Where was the 'Land of Nod?'

Copyright © 1987
by Capt. Larz Neilson

A new set of local "license" plates has made its appearance in Wilmington. Designed by local artist Adele Passmore, it resembles the license plate of 1980, issued on the 250th anniversary of Wilmington.

Like its predecessor, the plate denotes Goshen and the Land of Nod, two early localities which became a part of Wilmington in 1730.

This paper cannot fully agree with the depiction. At the same time one must recognize "artists' license." It is difficult to depict the areas that made up Wilmington in the small space that is allowed in the "license plate."

The Town Crier prepared an historical map, in 1980, to better depict the ancient areas of Wilmington. That map is displayed on this page, and it must be acknowledged that later information should be used to correct some of the display.

The Land of Nod, as shown on the map, is correctly shown as it was located by the selectmen of Wilmington and Andover, working together, some time after 1730. The northern boundary probably shows the boundaries of Wilmington owned land and Andover owned land, at that time.

But, historically, it is not properly located. The site of Nod was to be in the northern part of Goshen, as agreed by Charlestown land owners just after 1642.

Three thousand acres were set aside, to compensate those land owners for land they had lost when Woburn was set aside from Charlestown in 1642. That 3,000 acres would be located in the northern part of Goshen, between the Reading - Woburn line and the Woburn - Billerica line.

Silver Lake, then known as Sandy Pond, would have been in the Land of Nod, had the site as originally agreed upon been preserved.

As it happened, historically, all of the Land of Nod was taken from land that had been a part of Reading, in the early days of the Province of Massachusetts Bay.

The land was called Nod because it was beyond the domain of any church of that day. The church in Charlestown had originally included all of Goshen in its area. Woburn took over Goshen when it became a town, except for the northern part. But that tip was not in the Woburn area, nor was it in that of Charlestown.

Hence it was, in effect no one's land, such as the place where Abel went after he killed Cain, as related in Genesis.

The name Goshen, too, comes from the Old Testament. Goshen was the territory which was in the northeast part of Egypt.

The 1980 map did not show the bridge across the Ipswich River, on the Andover Road. That bridge was authorized by the Colonial legislature in 1644.

The date on the Pearson Tavern is incorrect. That tavern was constructed about 1807.

No date was shown for the mill on Lubbers Creek, at Glen Road. That mill probably dated from about 1705-6.

The farmhouse on Salem street, near the Wildcat Railroad, should show a date. The date was about 1740.

The Jaquith family, near the Billerica line, may have been living in the area as early as 1652. It is now quite certain that the Jaquiths were the first white people to have lived in what is now Wilmington.

The Andover Road (c 1637). The original road between Boston and Andover, and then on to Haverhill and to Maine.

The Charlestown Line (c 1636). The original division line between Charlestown and Lynn. Reading was made of a part of Lynn, and Woburn was a part of Charlestown.

The Shawsheen Line (c 1665). The agreed upon division line between Woburn and Billerica. It was laid out to be one mile east of the Shawsheen River.

Tewksbury was set off from Billerica in 1734. The Shawsheen line went as far as the Andover boundary.

Wilmington, at about the time of King George's War. The shaded area in the north was the Land of Nod, which was a part of the town when it was formed in 1730. The shaded area in the west (left) is the land acquired from Billerica, the Abraham Jaquith farm in 1731, and six other farms in 1737.

License plate The new Wilmington license plate gives only a rough approximation as to the whereabouts of the Land of Nod.

Skate shop opens

Skate shop opens at ice arena

Doors opened this week at the new Expo Center Skate Shop, Wilmington's only full-line hockey equipment outlet.

The Expo Center Skate Shop is located inside the Ristuccia Exposition Center on Main Street, the new training center for the Boston Bruins.

Open seven days a week, the Expo Center Skate Shop features a wide range of sticks and skates, as well as a full selection of equipment including helmets, shoulder pads, elbow pads, shin pads and gloves.

Regular hours at the Skate Shop are Monday through Friday, 3-10 p.m., Saturday and Sunday, 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. The Skate Shop will also be open during several dates in September when the public will be invited to view Bruins' practice sessions at the Ristuccia Exposition Center.

Fully stocked with laces, tape and a complete line of N.H.L. replica jerseys, the Expo Center Skate

Shop will specialize in immediate, no-wait skate sharpening.

"Because we are located inside the Ristuccia Exposition Center, we want to be able to completely service all the skaters using the rink, from the youngest youth league all the way up to the adult league," owner Ken Robinson commented.

"But we also look forward to serving the entire area hockey community, not only in Wilmington but in the surrounding towns as well."

Single family house prices now average $145k

Single family home prices in Massachusetts rose 12 percent in the second quarter over a year ago, according to data released today by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors.

The median price of a single family home in Massachusetts was $145,000, up from $129,500 a year ago. (The median means half the homes sold cost more and half cost less.)

The highest priced homes were in the 51 cities and towns surrounding Greater Boston where the median price was $185,000, up six percent over last year's $174,500.

Prices were lowest in the western region of the state including Berkshire, Franklin, Hampshire and Hampden counties where the median single family home cost $100,000 for the quarter, up 21 percent over last year.

In the central region of the state, encompassing Worcester county, prices rose 18 percent to a median of $128,900. The southeast region of the state registered the highest percentage jump - 23 percent - with the median price rising from $113,000 to $139,000, up five percent over last year's $151,400. On Cape Cod, the median was $139,900, up 19 percent.

Statewide, the number of homes listed for sale rose 20 percent. The number of sales rose 16 percent.

According to Paula K. Aberman, president of the Massachusetts Association of Realtors, the data indicates that housing sales and prices will continue to be strong through the remainder of 1987. "While we are expecting a continued slowdown in price increases over the next several quarters, the annual increase in housing values in Massachusetts continues to rise at a healthy rate," said Aberman.

The association expects statewide prices to rise 10 percent in 1987, noted Aberman.

(Date is based on information supplied by 20 realtor-affiliated multiple listing services (MLS) in Massachusetts. MLS is a cooperative listing of homes available for sales through its members.)

Wilmington Softball League

D and D clinches championship, 6-5

The Wilmington Softball League playoffs rolled on last week with heated action in both the Town Division and the men's over-35 circuit.

D and D Services clinched the Town Division championship with a three game sweep past Northeast Development. A summary of recent playoff action.

D and D Services 6 Northeast Development 5...D and D clinched the Town Division title with this victory that was sparked by the pitching of Jim Crowley and the timely hitting of Bob Woods (two hits).

Earl Paulsen and Joe Simmons smacked homeruns for Northeast in support of losing pitcher Bob Noel.

McNamara Tire 4 Charlie's Auto 0...Wally Neal fired a complete game eight-hitter for the victory, getting good support from Jim Meehan (two-run double) and Rick Froton with two hits in this over-35 league playoff game.

Losing pitcher Rusty Heubner had two hits for Charlie's as did teammate Bob Kelley.

Joe Barry Oil 9 Starwood 5...Tom Robichaud (two hits, three RBI's) and Gene Dussault (two hits, two RBI's) paced the winners as Frank Stone hurled the win over Steve Gilardi.

Jim Cardinale had three hits for Starwood and made an outstanding catch in centerfield, while mate Bill Doyle chipped in with two hits.

Joe Barry Oil 14 Spinelli Insurance 1...Dan Gillis (three hits, four RBI's) along with Dennis Demaggio and Tom Robichaud with two hits and three RBI's apiece, led the winners.

John Lynch and Frank Botte spanked two hits apiece for Spinelli's Insurance. Stone hurled the win over Bill Lemos.

Starwood 7 B and B Acoustical 5...Ed Silva ripped a two-run double and Jim Cardinale enjoyed a big game with a single and a sacrifice to drive in two runs for the winners.

Mark Peters and Ross Spinelli ripped three hits apiece for B and B as Steve Gilardi hurled the win over Joe Palladino.

McNamara Tire 6 Spinelli Insurance 4...Heated over 35 league action continued, with the Mac bats led by Bob MacKenzie with two hits and two runs scored and winning pitcher Wally Neal with a two-run single.

Losing hurler Bill Lemos helped his own cause with two hits in his two trips to the plate.

D and D Services 5 Northeast Development 3...Jim Crowley hurled a four-hitter and got plenty of bat support from Bob Woods (single, homer), Jim Litwinski (two hits, one RBI) and Crowley himself with two hits and three runs batted in. Bob Noel was the losing pitcher.

Shawsheen Tech swimming programs

The following swimming programs will be held at the Shawsheen Vocational Technical High School pool during the fall.

Shawsheen swim schools: Instruction is offered every Saturday in half hour sessions at 10:30, 11, and 12. Classes are taught by trained Shawsheen students under the direction of a certified Red Cross water safety instructor.

Starting date: Saturday, October 3.

Cost: $15 for eight lessons.

Registration: By phone, 667-2111, ext. 126 or 128 before 9 a.m.

Fitness swim: Residents and people who work in the Shawsheen area are invited to participate in a lap swimming program that is offered Monday through Friday starting September 14. The program meets at the following times: 5:45 to 6:45 a.m.; 8 to 9:30 p.m.

Cost: $15 per month or $100 for the school year (10 months); $5 per month for residents over 65 years of age.

Registration: Members may join at the first session they attend.

Family swim: Monday through Friday from 8 to 9:30 p.m. This program is for adults and children accompanied by adults. The pool is divided to provide opportunities for lap swimming, diving and recreational swimming.

Cost: $15 per month for the family; $10 for an individual.

Registration: At the door on the night you wish to swim.

Senior citizens swimming: Every Wednesday from 10 to 11 a.m. all seniors 50 years of age and older are invited to use the pool free of charge.

Dates: Starts October 7. Runs every Wednesday school is in session.

Registration: At the door on the day you wish to swim.

Adult swimming lessons: Lessons for beginners and those who wish to increase their proficiency will be offered on Saturdays between 12:30 and 1:15 p.m.

Dates: October 3 - November 21.

Cost: $3 per lesson.

Registration: By phone 667-2111.

Newport Boat Show Sept. 10-13

The Newport International Sailboat Show (NISS) has announced that Sail Newport, Inc. will be showcasing the world of sailing in a multi-media exposition during the show from September 10-13.

The Sail Newport Expo Center will feature special media attractions and guest speakers. Educational and entertaining programs will be scheduled on the hour, six times daily from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

A complete schedule of events will be posted daily at the show entrances and throughout the show grounds. Announcements will also be made prior to the start of each program. Admission to the Sail Newport Expo Center is free, compliments of Sail Newport, Inc. and the Newport International Sailboat Show. Seating will be first come, first served. Capacity is 100 people seated.

A sample of some of the attractions and speakers that have already been scheduled include: Ken Read, "The Present and Future of Sailboat Racing," Team One Newport, "Gear and Clothing Show," Joan Betterley, "Nutrition, Food Storage and Cooking Aboard," and Onne Van der Wal, "Newport Sailing." Other presentations will showcase multihull racing, cruising locally and overseas, the America's Cup Races, boating safety and sailing school options.

Sail Newport, Inc. is a non-profit organization established in 1983 to promote sailing events in the Newport, RI area.

The 17th edition of NISS will feature well over six acres of in-the-water and land-based displays. It marks the debut for a host of new boat designs and related products from hardware to electronics, to sails, to fashion items and much more. Insurance and finance companies abound for boatowners intensively researching those options. Newcomers to sailing will be interested in the NISS sailing school facility which will actually give free sailing demos.

NISS hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. Tickets are $8 for adults, $5 for children. Convenient satellite parking is available for $5 a day at the Newport Jay Alai on Admiral Kalbfus Road. Complimentary round-trip shuttles run continuously to the show site.

Please call show Manager Karla Holmes at the Newport Yachting Center (401) 846-1600 for further information.

Soccer kickoff

Wilmington Youth Soccer starts Saturday, September 12 at the Shawsheen School fields.

This season the WYSA is also kicking off the season with a field day Sunday, September 13. This will be a cookout, and field events are set for youngsters, parents and coaches.

Road race Oct. 12

The eleventh annual Tufts 10K for women road race sponsored by Tufts Associated Health Plan in cooperation with the YMCAs of Eastern Massachusetts will be held Monday, October 12 beginning at noon.

Runners will start on Beacon Street at the corner of Charles and will finish on Charles Street at Boston common.

The event is one of the most prestigious sporting events for women, featuring world-class competition, as well as the enthusiastic participation of thousands of runners of all ages and abilities.

The race features a flat and fast 10 kilometer (6.2 mile) course on which five American records have been set.

On race day, the Tufts Associated Health Plan and its co-sponsoring hospitals will present the third annual celebration of health and fitness.

This fair, open to runners and spectators alike, will feature demonstrations of healthy lifestyles such as stress management, sports medicine and nutrition.

North Shore tryouts

The North Shore Raiders Hockey Club will hold tryouts for a Mite travel team Wednesday, September 2 at 6 p.m. and Wednesday, September 9, also at 6 p.m. at the Ristuccia Expo Center on Main Street, Wilmington.

Youngsters born in 1979 or 1980 are eligible to tryout for the team. For more information, call Jack Guerin at 475-7065.

Outdoors column

by Bill Conlon

Oh.
Ooooooh.
This is just sooooo embarrassing!

It would be just too simple to write this week's Outdoors Column about something pleasant and fun, but I'm honor-bound to tell the truth as best as I can. And sometimes the truth hurts.

I went along on last Saturday's deep sea fishing trip with some 20 other souls from Tewksbury Rod & Gun Club, and this author had a less-than-terrific time.

I got seasick.

Now, I've been out deep sea fishing quite a few times, in various weather, but I've never had any problem. This time I lost it.

Violently.

Repeatedly.

The trip started out of Gloucester at 6 a.m., in a light rain, aboard the Yankee Fleet's "Wejack." But the rain wasn't the bad part.

Once we cleared the harbor entrance, the sea got nasty. The little ship began tossing on six- to eight-foot swells and it never let up.

Better make that eight-foot walls of seawater, with whitecaps all over the horizon. Up we'd go, brutally, then back down with equal force. Then back up again. The worst of the swells made the ship's bell ring, not because anyone rang it, but because the bell's clapper was swinging that hard. It was bad.

Even young Captain Arsenault admitted it was a bit rough. He later called home to suggest the Fleet cancel all afternoon fishing and whale-watching excursions.

Look at it this way: The all-day fishing trip was called off at 11 a.m. after a vote taken by club president Mike Carroll. Mike didn't care, perhaps thanks to his years in the Navy on a destroyer tender, but the final vote came up 19-2 to leave early.

Walking on the pitching deck was impossible. The only way to move around on the Wejack was to lurch from wall to beam to rail.

And that's how I lost it. My stomach started to squirm, but it wasn't too bad. Then I got the chills, which meant my system was starting to shut off extremities because there was a problem inside. Next the mouth started to water profusely and a sharp stabbing pain appeared amidships, and that was the clincher. I headed for the rail.

Another member of the party also took a close-up look at the waves, but I'll never divulge the name. It's not important. I was the worst one.

I managed to recover somewhat between episodes, at least enough to catch four cod, but I made about a half-dozen visits to the rail. The fishing was pretty good, but the trip itself just wasn't that much fun.

And it wasn't funny, either. Since my ordeal at the rail, just about everyone who's heard the tale has laughed, starting with my demented kid brother. He laughed like hell, but it just was not funny.

And my agony wasn't unusual, either. To learn about the cruel realities of seasickness, I talked this week to Hardy Jones, physician's assistant with the Coast Guard Support Center in Boston. Mr. Jones pointed out a few interesting aspects to this age-old malady.

"The most common cause of seasickness is the just motion of the ocean itself," Jones said, and there was certainly a lot of that over the weekend. But there are quite a few other factors involved.

First off, Jones said, seasickness is caused by mostly psychological factors, but general health is also important. Any disturbance of the sinuses, GI system or respiratory tract, all of which can affect the inner ear and therefore balance, can bring on the heaves.

As it so happens, I'm just coming down from a nasty head cold, which left my ears plugged for days. My sense of balance has been askew for a while now. Hmmm.

While there are drugs to prevent seasickness, I've never used them since I've always been able to control that sloshing feeling.

Dramamine, according to Jones, is both an antihistamine, which dries up the sinuses, and a sedative.

While any sedative would work, he said, Dramamine was the first.

The Coast Guard, Jones said, prefers scopolamine, a prescription sedative which is applied through the skin with an adhesive patch behind the ear. The drug also acts to shut off the flow of juices in the stomach, which he said is yet another factor in seasickness.

Looking back, at least one person in the party was wearing a patch behind the ear. Hmmm.

So, while my thanks go out to Mike Carroll and the troops from Tewksbury Rod & Gun, so too do my apologies. Ulp.

Worst of all, though, is I feel like such a wimp for losing it.

Oh well. At least now I can use a medical excuse. Still ...

The annual S.W.E.A.T. clean-up of the Shawsheen River will not be held on the planned date, due to a communications foul-up. Instead, the river work will take place on Sept. 19, not on Sept. 12 as listed here. There will still be breakfast at 8 a.m., with the river clean-up afterwards. Bring rakes, boats, chainsaws and volunteers, and call 858-3733 for more info.

A free hunter safety course will begin Thursday, Sept. 3 at 7 p.m. at the Tewksbury Rod & Gun Club headquarters on Chandler Street. Just show up to register. The class will run until October 15.

The TR&G is also planning to hold its annual outing on Sept. 13 at the club grounds. The event will have a pig roast and flea market, among other things.

Also on Sept. 13, look for the Lowell Fly Fishers bass derby on the Merrimack from 7 a.m. until 2.

Nice defense

The Charlie's Auto team turned in some solid defense in a recent victory over the Lions' Club in Wilmington over-35 league playoff action.

The best

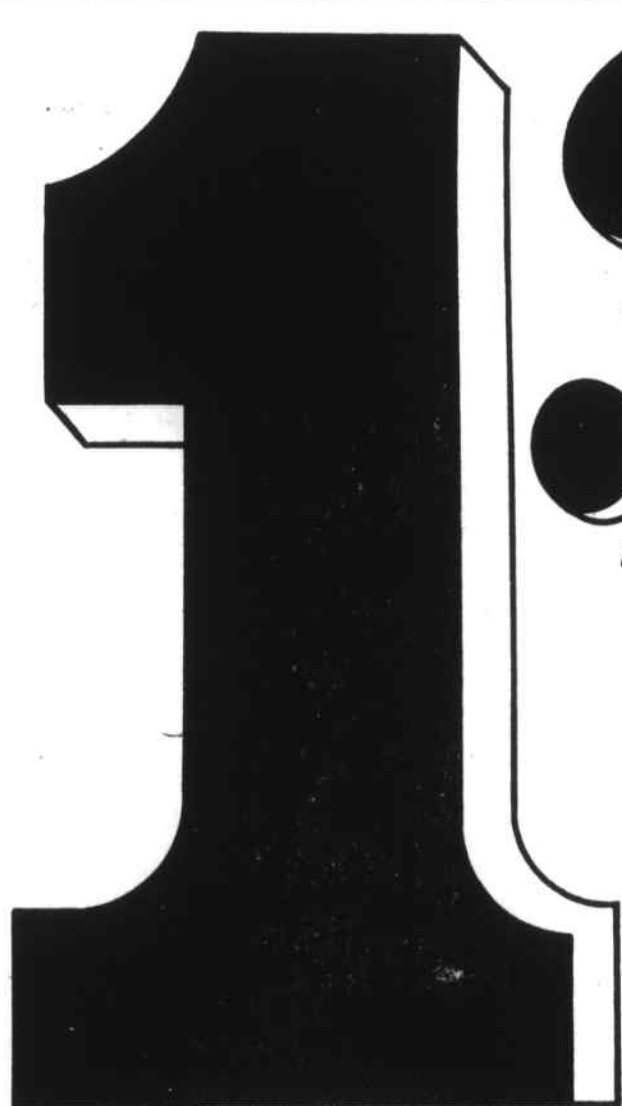

The Wilmington High School field hockey girls will be gunning for yet another Eastern Massachusetts Tournament berth this season.

Newport trip

The Wilmington Recreation Department has started to plan for its fall trips for adults and family units in Wilmington. People from surrounding towns and friends of Wilmingtonites are welcome on a space available basis. The first trip this fall will be to beautiful Newport, R.I. on Saturday, September 19.

The group will visit the Brick Market Place by foot for shopping and lunch and then tour Narragansett Bay by boat, and tour the Elms Mansion. There will also be a narrated bus tour along the mansion studded shoreline.

Cost is $24 per person; $20 for ages 12 and under. Call the Rec Department, 658-4270 for more information.

Jennifer Adams of Reading

She hasn't time for pain

By PHYLLIS NISSEN

Jennifer Adams is a dancer, sales representative, teacher, choreographer, and college student. Jennifer Adams is also in the second year of an "active flare" caused by the juvenile rheumatoid arthritis (JRA) from which she has suffered for half of her 20 years. The thing of it is she radiates perfect health.

In fact most days, unless she tells you about the pain she's in — which she won't — you'd never guess that she feels anything less than wonderful. A junior communications major at Simmons College, she works part-time for a national dancewear company covering four of the largest department store chains in the area north of Boston. She also teaches pre-dance, ballet, jazz, and tap at LaPierre School of Dance in Reading.

Adams is just back from the American Juvenile Arthritis Organization (AJAO) Conference in California where she choreographed dance and exercise workshops for seven to nine-year-olds. Although often a volunteer at telethons and other fundraisers for the Massachusetts Chapter of the Arthritis Foundation as well as a spokesperson on panels and television talk shows, attending such a national conference was a new experience for her. So was the fact that to get from airplane to taxi she had to rely on a wheelchair for the first time in her life.

"A lot of the kids don't like to do exercises," she says, "so the first thing we did was put regular arthritis-type exercises to music. That's what I did when I was a little kid and that's the only thing that could get me through them. I'm living proof that exercise helps."

That wasn't always the situation. Not only did it take almost four years to diagnose her arthritis, it has taken almost 10 for Adams to get the go-ahead from doctors to dance. She danced anyway. "The arthritis has been active in my jaw and hands for a year now and is still in the rest of my body. I have a lot of aches and pains but it's not fixed in an ankle or knee and I think that's because of dancing," she says. "There was a little boy with severe arthritis at the conference. We did the exercise and he loved it. It gave him a good feeling and put a smile on his face and that's what it did to me too. I love teaching and I love little kids — they're therapeutic."

"This convention was excellent because it focused on families," she says. "Siblings attended sessions together. A kid doesn't want to sit there and exercise while his brother or sister watches TV. Parents should be involved — they always want to try your braces or taste your medicine. They can exercise with you too."

"The attitude of kids now is much better than when I was younger," she continues. "Kids with arthritis then were told to stay in bed. They know so much today, even at four years old. They grow up so quickly, so aware of their bodies and what they can and can't do. I was shocked at the kids. It's very hard to convey how you feel to other people, to figure out who really wants to know, and what you can and can't talk about."

These kids know that already and I'm just learning at 20."

Aware that she is often sought out to speak about arthritis because she looks so "normal," Adams tells the following story: "One seven-year-old girl looked at me in the morning and said 'you really don't look like you feel good,' and I looked at her and said 'you really don't look like you feel good.' 'You're right,' said the girl. 'Will you show me how to fix it — with makeup?'"

The issues of appearance, reality and sticking up for oneself are other issues which Adams feels today's kids understand better than she did. "People think you have to be in a wheelchair or brace to be handicapped," she says. "But really, children and young adults confined to wheelchairs because of their arthritis are in the minority. Before the law changed recently, I was not even considered 'handicapped' enough to qualify for an HP plate. That's ridiculous. You can't be a little bit handicapped — it's like being a little bit pregnant."

Today's kids know when to stop, that if they rest for a while they'll be able to do more. I don't like going to my job looking like I can't walk. If I feel okay, I don't park in the HP spot anyway."

And that's another thing. Adams never knows how she'll feel when she wakes up. "When I'm 80, I'll still have 'juvenile' rheumatoid arthritis," she says. "It can strike very young children and is more severe than osteoarthritis — 125,000 children have JRA."

On my 10th birthday I got a bicycle and when I went to lift my leg over it, I couldn't. I was on and off crutches for two-and-one-half years and consumed many bottles of aspirin every day before it was diagnosed. For the last six months I've been on really heavy medication. Before that, I was in a medicated remission for three years. I could wake up tomorrow and my 'flare' could be over — or I could be paralyzed."

As it is, her present medication causes nausea, dry hair and skin, and fever: "the list goes on." The disease and its treatment determine what and when she can eat and the fact that she has to be careful of insect bites, bee stings and sunshine. Her medications and therapy are carefully monitored by Dr. Jean Jackson of Brigham and Women's Hospital with whom she is constantly in touch and from whom she receives "no pampering and much encouragement." Because her arthritis is systemic, even her eyes must be closely watched.

When the disease struck, Adams had been a dance student for six years and had already appeared with the Boston Ballet in "Sleeping Beauty" and the "Nutcracker." At the age of 14 she finally realized that her dream of becoming a professional dancer was no longer realistic. After a long talk with "mentor, teacher and close friend" Margaret LaPierre, she started training at the Dance Teachers Club of Boston, graduated, and began teaching her own classes at the unusually young age of 16 at LaPierre School.

Last spring she choreographed the Reading High production of "Fiddler on the Roof," a three-month intense time commitment which taught her how well she can succeed at anything: "I'm tough. I like what I do and I like it to look good."

She has learned, though, that teaching 17 dance classes is a bit much even for her. For a while now she has been living at home again in Reading, having found living away at school and being sick just too difficult. In the spring she danced in three numbers at the LaPierre recital and choreographed four.

When one child has arthritis, the whole family has the disease. Adams' strength and stamina which her arthritis constantly saps are replenished by the energy and love of her entire extended family and friends. Adams has received the "courage award" from the Mass. Chapter of the Arthritis Foundation; her parents have separately been named "volunteer of the year." "I've been a real witch sometimes and it's difficult for my family," she says. "I don't like to deal with people when I don't feel good. It's hard on my younger sister Missy. She's my teaching assistant and I'm really tough on her — so she can be what I couldn't be. If I start feeling too sorry for myself, my older brother Geoff will tease me out of it — or tell me not to be a jerk — but he and his wife keep up with the disease and I know they're pretty concerned."

Her father Charlie has just finished a term as chairman of the Mass. Chapter and is now an area vice chairman of the Arthritis Foundation. "I think my father has finally realized that I do have something wrong with me," she says. "It's tough for men. My mother always went to the doctor with me and now my father says 'maybe you should slow down.' But I'm just like him — I do all there is to do and more."

Her mother Terry runs self-help courses for the Foundation to teach people how to cope — when the doctors go home for the day. "I have the disease and she knows everything about it," says Adams. "The convention program chairperson Harold O'Flaherty said it all when he said 'fathers, love your wives and love those children.'"

As a direct result of their involvement with Adams and her family, Matt Siegel of KISS-108 and WBZ's Gary LaPierre have participated for years in various fundraising activities for arthritis. In fact, Siegel is now a trustee in the Mass. Chapter. Together they are planning a dance-a-thon for the fall.

Naturally it all comes back to dancing. "I really need to dance. If I don't dance, I'm emotionally a wreck," says Adams. "I was very sick at the beginning of this summer so I didn't want to dance and then I got lazy and ended up feeling unattractive and sorry for myself. Then I went to the convention — my mother dragged me — and I saw four-year-olds on anti-cancer drugs and people my age who look 'normal' on dialysis. And I said 'well, forget that' and I started dancing again. One of my friends calls it PMA — positive mental attitude. I don't feel like I'm an idiot or loser or that I can't do anything. I can do a lot. I have a lot to give and I realize that now. I feel great mentally."

"I think it's important that in the past my parents let me do basically what I wanted when it came to dancing," she continues. "The doctors would say 'no,' my father would say 'yes,' and my mother wouldn't say anything. If I could talk to every parent, I'd tell them to let their children decide. It's bad enough that a kid is seven years old and can't run and play. Today even the doctors admit that I'd probably be in a wheelchair if I hadn't continued dancing."

"Not really working at the beginning of the summer was the worst thing I could have done. I felt really bad. Now when my elbow hurts and I'm busy, I can brush it off and tell myself that I don't really have time for that."

Adams has thought a lot about having a family. The votes aren't all in on how hereditary JRA is. "I want children but I don't know if I want children," she says. "And that's a very common feeling. I guess if my kids had arthritis I'd know how to handle it but I'd sure feel guilty."

Meanwhile, she's planning a trip to Disney World with her boyfriend and his family. And again for the first time, a wheelchair is definitely in those plans — she's not about to risk injury, not with all she has going.

She is once again dancing every day, marking time until school begins. Simmons College has been "wonderful," explaining to teachers why she may seem "loopy," letting her tape-record classes, providing a notetaker and parking space. She will continue to attend classes there, work a "part-time" 30-hour week selling, and teach "only" 10 dancing classes in Reading. She's making plans already for the next national conference where she'll play an even larger role.

"I remember that Jennifer was ill for quite a while before a diagnosis was made," says Margaret LaPierre. "After the diagnosis I was more amazed by her than ever. She's terrific and just never stops. When I teach her I'm never aware of her arthritis because she never lets me be."

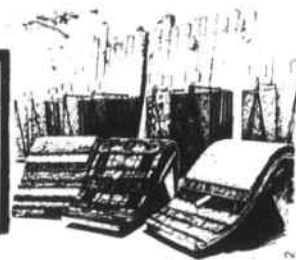

"However, when we travel — when I live with her and with it — I see what it's like. Whenever she has to get up in the morning to take a dance class, I watch her start the day in so much pain and I'm amazed again," she continues. "She has tremendous drive and just keeps coming back. She's one of the most responsible employees I've ever had and is always there to teach, no matter how she feels. She's fantastic and she sets a fine example for others. I like Jennifer."

Last week, the Arthritis Foundation helped Jennifer Adams get ready for a date.

The Arthritis Foundation teaches people with arthritis how to help themselves. With simple, effective and easy to learn methods.

If you have arthritis, or someone you know has, contact your local chapter or write: Arthritis Foundation, Department A, P.O. Box 19000, Atlanta, GA 30326.

IT'S TIME WE TOOK ARTHRITIS SERIOUSLY.

Parade of Events

BEGINNING EXPERIENCE

A Young People's Beginning Experience weekend for young people 8-17 from single parent families will be held Oct. 16-18 at Rolling Ridge in North Andover.

The YPBE is a weekend designed to help young people begin to understand, process and work through the problems resulting from parental loss and life in a single parent family.

For more information, please call Dan Nocivelli 364-2789 (evenings) or David Winders 263-5077 (evenings).

SAT PREPARATION

Applications are now being accepted for an intensive eight-week SAT preparation and review course, to be held each Tuesday evening from 7:30 to 10 p.m., beginning September 15 and ending November 3 at the Center Congregational Church, Lynnfield.

The timing of this course has been planned so that students will be prepared to take the November SAT exams, to be given on the Saturday following course completion.

The program will be staffed by two certified teachers who have in-depth experience in SAT preparation: Eleanor Canter (mathematics) and Barbara Martin (English). Both teachers also hold masters degrees.

Class size will be kept very small to allow for individualized attention. Since there are only a limited number of spaces, early registration is suggested. All books and materials are included as part of the course fee.

For information, please call 334-6147 or 334-4183.

WOMEN WHO LOVE TOO MUCH

A one-day workshop on September 12 for women who are drawn to abusive or painful relationships. Facilitated by Fran Meline, Certified Family Therapist. For further information call (617) 924-4133.

FALL WILDFLOWER

Have you always wanted to learn more about wildflowers? Call the New England Wild Flower Society for their new fall brochure which lists an array of courses, field trips, and workshops.

Programs such as "Landscape Design for the Home Gardener," "Sedges Have Edges and Rishes Are Round," "Plants of Point Judith," and "Wildflower Propagation" offer ideas for everyone from the novice to the expert.

To obtain a copy of the fall/winter program brochure phone the New England Wild Flower Society at (617) 877-7630, 237-4924; or write to Programs, New England Wild Flower Society, Garden in the Woods, Hemenway Road, Framingham, Ma. 01701.

TEA PARTY SHIP

Boston Tea Party Ship and Museum — There's no better place to combine a good time with a history lesson than aboard the full-scale working replica of the Tea Party Ship. Visitors say history comes alive for them when they toss tea chests overboard in their own symbolic protest.

Audio-visual presentations in the adjacent museum and lively discussions with colonial-costumed guides add to the feeling of having really been at Boston's most famous protest over 200 years ago. Complimentary tea, of course. Located at the Congress Street Bridge, on HarborWalk, Boston's waterfront walking trail.

Hours: Daily 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Admission: Adults $3.25; Children (5-12) $2.25; under age 5 free. Group rates available. For information call (617) 338-1773.

SQUARE DANCE

Cosmopolitan Square Dance Club of Wakefield will hold their "Fall Round-Up Square Dance" at the Northeast Regional Vocational School in Wakefield on Saturday, September 5 from 8 to 11 p.m. Admission is $3.00. Mainstream level. Bob Silva calling Squares and Norma Silva cueing Rounds.

SIMPLE SPOKEN IRISH

Irish language classes for the Fall of 1987 will begin in the basement hall of St. Malachy's Church, Burlington at 7 p.m. on Monday, September 21.

The class for beginners at 7 p.m. will emphasize simple spoken Irish, including greetings, songs, proverbs, and conversations on everyday topics.

The intermediate class will begin at 8:30 the same evening and will continue the work begun in last year's beginners' class. Textbooks for both classes will be the same: Buntus Cainte I and Progress in Irish.

The program is sponsored by Cumann na Gaeilge in Boston and made possible by the generosity of Reverend Father James F. Rafferty, Pastor of St. Malachy's.

MACROBIOTICS

"You Are What You Eat" will be the highlight of the monthly program on Tuesday, September 15 at 7 p.m. at The Kushi Foundation. The introduction to the macrobiotic way of eating and lifestyle will be held at 17 Station Street, Brookline. There is no charge for admission.

According to Phil Massarsky, Managing Director of The Foundation, "The program is an opportunity to discover the benefits of macrobiotics. Speakers will share their experiences improving health and recovering from illnesses."

The macrobiotic diet includes whole grains, fresh vegetables, beans, fruit, fish and nuts in nutritionally balanced amounts. Chemically processed foods are not recommended.

For reservations and more information call 738-0045. Complementary tickets will be mailed prior to the event.

DIXIELAND CONCERT

The New Black Eagle Jazz Band will be performing a benefit concert for Greenpeace at 3 p.m. on Sunday, September 13, at Jordan Hall at the New England Conservatory of Music. Tickets are $12 and $16 and are available through all Ticketmaster outlets. Call 787-8000. Tickets may also be purchased at the Jordan Hall Box Office From September 7 through September 13.

AEROBIC EXERCISE

Aerobic Exercise classes will be offered to the community at the Choate Hospital in Woburn beginning on Tuesday, September 8 and continuing for eight weeks. The program will be held on Tuesday and Thursday evenings through October 29 from either 7:10 to 8 p.m. or 8:30 to 9 p.m.

Aerobic Exercise is exercise routines set to music. The routines require the use of oxygen in the body, making the heart and lungs work harder to strengthen the cardiovascular system. Participants tend to feel more energetic because the exercises increase one's endurance level.

Pre-registration is required. For additional information, call the Community Health Education Department at Choate Hospital 933-6700, ext. 4377.

ST. BARBARA'S FALL FESTIVAL

The Annual Fall Festival of St. Barbara's on Cambridge Street (Route 3) in Woburn will be held on Saturday, September 19 from 10 a.m. to dusk and is free to all.

This year, the well-established Puppetrio will give two performances of folk-tales, magic and song at 1 and 3 p.m. The fair will also boast a selection of tables by local artisans in addition to those pastimes which have made the festival so successful in the past.

For further information, call the Rectory at 933-4130.

CANCER SUPPORT GROUP

The problems of coping with cancer are many and complex. How do you deal with treatment, discipline, nutrition, family, finances, employers, and insurance?

These and other issues are faced by cancer patients and their families on a day-to-day basis and, as a community service, will be addressed by the Hospital's cancer support group.

Beginning Wednesday, September 16, at 7:30 p.m., the Social Services Department will hold the first in a series of eight free meetings. The cancer support group will meet the first and third Wednesday of each month from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in the Social Services Department office.

For more information and registration, contact the Social Services Department, Winchester Hospital, 729-9000, ext. 3140.

REGIONAL COLLEGE FAIR

Admissions officers from more than 200 private and public colleges and universities in New England will participate in the 1987 College Fair at Bentley College on Sunday, Sept. 30 from 2 to 4 p.m. in the

Charles A. Dana Center.

Learn about educational and career options, admission requirements and procedures, scholarship and financial aid programs, and more. Sponsored by Bentley College and the New England Association of College Admissions Counselors (NEACAC).

Roberta D'Ambrosio Davis Barbara Hazelton

Jean Cleary, President of Wintergreen Properties, announced that the Associates of the month of July were; in the Derry office, Roberta D'Ambrosio Davis, and in the Londonderry office, Barbara Hazelton. This designation is given to the sales associate who does the greatest volume of business in that month.

Roberta has been in Wintergreen's Derry office since its inception two years ago, and has won this award several times.

Barbara has been with Wintergreen for the past three and a half years, and has also won this award several times.

Wintergreen operates out of two locations, the historic Dutton-Gilcrest House, located just off route 102 in Londonderry, and the Sullivan Building at 61 East Broadway in Derry.

Nature facts

It's tough to find good household help these days — but. According to International Wildlife magazine, Texas screech owls capture blind snakes and carry them to their nests. The snakes, which normally live underground and feed on termite larvae, help rid the nests of insects that parasitize young birds. Apparently the housecleaning pays off. Biologists found that young owls in nests with snakes grew faster and had a lower mortality rate than those in snakeless nests.

Quannapowitt Players opens 51st season

The Quannapowitt Players announce their 51st Season and promise their patrons a range of productions that will generate laughter, touch hearts and revive fond memories of days gone by.

Performances will be at the Players' theatre located at 55 Hopkins Street, Reading. Originally a two-room schoolhouse, the building, now a historic landmark, was transformed into a theatre in 1972.

Opening the season will be American dramatist Thornton Wilder's ode to the indestructibility of the American family. Beginning September 18th theatregoers will meet George Antrobus, his wife and two children and their maid Lily, of Excelsior, New Jersey. Under the direction of Jay Stone, Wilder's classic comedy portrays the Antrobus family coping day to day with crises large and small, surviving the Ice Age, wars, depression, and the double feature by "The Skin of Our Teeth."

The second show is a very different kind of comedy according to director Ray Sipola. Larry Shue's "The Foreigner" was voted the Best New Play of 1985. Its unlikely hero is Charlie, an engaging but wimpy Englishman, painfully shy, who avoids relating with people by feigning inability to speak English. Confident of their safety, those around Charlie reveal secrets and peccadilloes with hilarious results.

Third on the Q.P. stage is a heart-warming slice of Americana as only Neil Simon can write. Drawn from Neil Simon's series of vaguely autobiographical plays,

"Brighton Beach Memoirs," directed by Armand Fillian, chronicles "...the unbelievable fantastic and completely private thoughts of Eugene Morris Jerome, in the fifteenth year of his life, in the year 1937, in the community of Brighton Beach, Borough of Brooklyn, City of New York, Empire State of the American Nation..."

Gently topping off the season will be an intimate look at the struggle for love (and the fear of finding it) from the perspective of two very ordinary people amidst World War II. The Pulitzer Prize for drama went to Lanford Wilson for "Talley's Folly." Perhaps his character, Sally Talley, describes it best: "a one-two-three, one-two-three no holds-barred romantic story." Q.P.'s Susan Hodder states she plans to direct this "bit of fine theatrical china" with a gloved hand.

The Quannapowitt Players' season subscription offers the community four productions for less than the price of one Boston theatre ticket. In addition, season subscribers receive newsletters and invitations to meetings and special events. Senior citizens and students enjoy discounted rates. "Although we are not paid," comments Q.P. President Honey Angell, "our standard for theatre quality is as high as any professional equity company in the area. Our patrons have returned year after year with this compliment."

Information on season subscriptions and tickets for individual shows can be obtained by calling the Quannapowitt Players' Ticket Line at 245-4884 or dropping a note to 55 Hopkins Street, Reading, Ma. 01867.

Season subscription price is $23.00 for four plays with a discounted rate of $19.00 for senior citizens and full-time students.

Free performances for senior citizens will precede each show's opening night as usual. These Thursday night productions will be on September 27, November 12, February 11 and April 21. All area senior citizens are invited to attend.

Curtain for all performances is at 8:15 p.m. except for Sundays which is 7 p.m.

No night deposits at Goodwill

The generosity of night time donors has Goodwill Industries scrambling to halt an unwanted flow of midnight gifts.

Goodwill officials explain that most of their donated items come through a network of Attended Donation Centers (ADC's). These are yellow 27-foot trailers, open usually from 9 to 5, six days a week. They are usually emptied daily.

Each Donation Center has an attendant on duty to load the trailer, to maintain the area, and to give out tax receipts.

Occasionally, during the night when there is no attendant on duty, someone will donate goods which may be vandalized, stolen, or ruined by weather. At these times, well intended donations become liabilities.

Goodwill must send out a special truck to remove the damaged goods, and then must pay a contractor to dispose of them.

It was Sunday, July 19, and at 7:15 a.m. Boy Scout Troop 701 departed on a High Adventure Trip in the Adirondack Mountains. This trek would cover 75 miles of canoeing in assigned Adirondack Scout Guide was 20-year old Eagle Scout Patrick Williams from Rochester, N.Y.

Monday morning the scouts awoke at 6 to the sound of raindrops on their tents. Fortunately it was only a shower and was over in an hour. It was an interesting night for Doug, Dave and Pat as the ropes holding their cots together parted and they ended up with soggy cots!

The van arrived around 10, the scouts loaded the canoes and packs and headed for Blue Mountain Lake where the actual trek would begin.

They paddled down the lake past a number of nice summer cottages into Eagle Lake, passing under a fantastically constructed wooden bridge that caught everyone's eye. Finally the sun came out, but the scouts endured another shower just before reaching Raquette Lake — then they had to paddle into the wind for a while — but eventually it shifted direction and the wind was at their backs.

While Mr. Priest and Mr. Szabo paddled to Beecher Island (the destination for the day) the rest of the boys lashed their canoes together, got out the tarp and hoisted sail.

On Tuesday they left Beecher Island under beautiful sunny skies and paddled to the end of Raquette Lake where they portaged one-half mile to Forked Lake. This was a warm-up for what was to come.

At the end of Forked Lake they had a mile-and-a-half portage around the rapids on the Raquette River. After this portage they ate lunch at a lean-to and swam in the river before heading downstream. Another portage around Buttermilk Falls (only a couple of hundred yards) and they continued on before coming to another set of rapids. Here they slogged through the mud on a one-half mile portage and finally set up camp at the lean-to before going swimming again. They walked almost as much as they canoed — eight miles of walking and nine miles of canoeing.

They got up at 6:30 a.m. on Wednesday. It was very calm and peaceful early in the morning and the reflections on the water were beautiful. They went swimming before heading down the last 10 miles of Long Lake.

The trip down the lake was very pretty: for the first three miles there were lots of camps, but after that very few camps and lots of campsites. At the end of the lake they entered the Raquette River again, and after four-and-a-half miles, reached the final portage of their trip — this one was another one-and-a-half miles around Raquette Falls and was pretty steep in places.

They set up camp at the lean-to, swam below the rapids and ate supper consisting of beef soup, chicken and rice, peas and raspberry cobbler.

That night the deer flies and mosquitoes were bad. Everyone got a nice sunburn and were all tired after paddling 18 miles.

The next day, Thursday, they were up at 5:30 because of the mosquitoes. They started down the river about 8:15 and by noontime had reached Trombley's Landing, a lean-to on a high bank along the river. While paddling down the river they were treated to Troop 701's rendition of Christmas carols by Doug, Dave, Eric and Gary. Before lunch they swam in the river and after lunch decided not to stay there but to go another eight miles to Tupper Bluffs.

Unfortunately the campsite was occupied so they had to do a bit of "low-impact" camping along the shore. After supper the scouts paddled across the bay to the bluffs where they spent about two hours jumping off the 20-foot high cliffs (see photo). To some, this was the high point of the trip.

The last day on the water they got up at 6 a.m. and were on their way down Tupper Lake at 7:15. The winds were blowing most of them relaxed and played cards in the afternoon while Mr. Priest and Mr. Szabo went to the Camp Water Carnival.

Patrick (the guide) presented all with an Adirondack Trek patch and the boys gave him a Troop 701 neckerchief signed by all.

The next morning everyone prepared to take down the tents. They received a surprise visit quite hard in their faces and the waves were almost splashing into canoes until they got behind the shelter of some islands. After an hour the wind died down and they arrived at Bog River Falls (the day's destination).

from Jim "Marmaduke" Seaton who had been the Trek Leader in 1984. After a quick breakfast they hit the road for home with a big treat being a stop at MacDonald's in

The van arrived at 11 a.m. and by noon they were back at Camp Sabbattis. The hot showers got a good workout and cats who needs at least six or eight hours of sleep a night, or forget it, I'm worthless the next day.

On this night I refused to allow myself the misfortune of going through the following day feeling wasted away to nothing. I had too darn much on the agenda to let it happen. So I had to reach into the deep, dark recesses of my slightly warped brain to come up with a solution to my dilemma. I couldn't come up with anything new, so I opted for the old stand-by solution: I climbed out of bed, stark naked, and sauntered into the kitchen, where I pulled out a table chair and plunked myself in front of the refrigerator. I opened the door and retrieved a cold can of Lite beer and popped the top. I think I took a sip, but I'm not sure. I always open a can of beer in these situations, but I don't think I've ever finished one. Then I reached over to the counter where I always keep a pad of paper and a pen. Then I proceeded to write a few lines of poetry. Nothing New Yorkerish; just some nonsensical verse, just boring enough to hopefully put me back into that tired state again. Sure enough, with the beer left unfinished, I found myself letting the pen and pad slip from between my fingers and traipsing back to bed and a good night's sleep in no time flat.

Before I drifted off, however, a few other solutions to my insomnia crept into my mind. I thought I'd share a few with you readers. There is the most obvious solution: reading a dull book. Most people would consider titles such as James A. Michener's "Poland," Thomas Mann's "The Magic Mountain," and Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice" as sufficiently boring enough to do the trick. I would also like to add a couple of other less obvious titles to the list. Sandra H. Leiblum and Lawrence A. Pervin's "Principles and Practice of Sexual Therapy" and anything by yours truly. Certainly helpful in reaching your goal.

Watching tv can also be a familiar solution to attacks of insomnia. Not just regular tv, however. You've got to watch cable tv. Cable tv these days is the most boring thing in the world. If viewing thirty minutes of one of those silly cable tv productions — say, the shopper's channel — doesn't knock you out, nothing will. You'd better consider getting a sledge hammer to whack yourself over the head with. If all else fails, turn on HBO or one of those other movie channels, and tune in a movie which you've already seen three times in the last week. That's bound to help put you to sleep at four in the morning.

The next solution is less obvious. You've got to think about this one for a while. You go into the bathroom, switch on the light over the vanity — it's important that it's the one over the vanity, not the overhead light — and stand in front of the mirror and really take a close look at yourself. I mean, really stare into that mug of yours. Study every little nook and cranny. Study that funky little hair that won't stay down on your eyebrow. Peer deeply into those blackheads on your nose. Examine closely how much your adam's apple is beginning to protrude. Before you know it you'll have bloodshot eyes and you'll be on your way back to bed, drifting off into the best night's sleep you've had in weeks. A buddy of mine tried this solution and he ended up falling asleep on the hopper! His wife found him there the next morning.

Exercising isn't a bad idea. Doing a few push-ups and sit-ups during the wee-hours when you can't sleep always seems to make you tired again. I find jogging at that hour helps to make me tired again. There are drawbacks to running at four in the morning, of course. You have to beware of muggers, flashers, drunk drivers and stray pit bulls. All of which may have the capacity to not only make you sleepy again but possibly put your lights out for good. Jogging with a .357 magnum helps. Even if you don't encounter a mugger, the weight of the gun alone makes you exhausted.

A few insomniacs whom I've spoken to say the wee-hours are also a good time to do some housekeeping. I'm not one to go overboard with cleaning even during daylight hours (I'd rather pay somebody to come in to do the chores), so the idea of dusting furniture when I can't sleep doesn't appeal to me. Just the thought of it makes me sleepy, which I guess is the whole idea. Whatever works is all that counts. I even know a fellow who enjoys working on his car when he can't sleep at night. He claims he actually gets more into fiddling with his vehicle at that time than during daytime hours, which leads me to wonder if he's actually becoming tired from the work. It sounds to me like he gets so into tuning up his car that he forgets about sleep altogether.

There are things you should never do, if you're trying to make yourself tired during bouts of insomnia. For instance, you should never eat a lot. A couple of cookies, maybe. But all that left-over Chinese food, never. I didn't listen to my better judgement on numerous occasions and I ate everything in sight in my refrigerator. Sure, I got sleepy and went back to bed. But the problem with this solution is this: you inevitably wake up again a short time later. You don't just open your eyes and say, "Hey, I'm awake again." You jump up suddenly, sometimes screaming out some incoherent growling noise, which scares the heck out of you and your partner, if you don't sleep alone. On a couple of occasions I've actually jumped over my partner and leapt out of bed! Talk about frightening the bedcovers off someone!

Finally, forget counting sheep. I always lose count and have to start over again. This doesn't make me more sleepy; it aggravates the heck out of me, and I end up more alert than before I went to bed. If you're going to try concentrating on something, try

Day care is available for three, four and five year olds from 8:05 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Operating on school days — 180 days.

Transportation needs to be provided by parents. The center is run by a qualified professional staff assisted by high school students. A caring environment where children learn as they have fun is provided by the center.

There is a fee per week and care is available to children from any town in the district.

Parents may receive further information by calling 246-0810. After September 9 calls will be taken any time at ext. 197.

Applications will also be accepted on an ongoing basis throughout the school year.

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

No man is an "Island" entire of itself. Every man is a piece of the continent — a part of the main. Therefore, never send to know for whom the bell tolls; it tolls for thee. We are all interdependent on one another. If all the preachers and garbage collectors went on strike at the same time — truthfully — (I mean no disrespect,) who would you miss first? Sam Walter Foss, summed it all up with these few words, "Let me live in my house by the side of the road and be a friend of man."

Young men and women, if your sweetheart treats you like any "pebble" on the beach, try being a little boulder. "Are your parents home?" I asked Dennis Tully. "They was in but now they is out." "What," I exclaimed, "They 'was' in, now they 'is' out! Where on earth is your grammar?" "Oh, she's in the kitchen baking an apple pie."

Grace Boutwell, put an ad in the Woburn Times offering a reward for return of her lost pet poodle. Two days later, Officer Kevin Fisher carrying the fluffy dog under his arm returned it to its grateful owner, refusing any reward. "Where did you find my little poopsie?" "Bobby Burns had it, tied to the end of a pole and he was washing the windows at the Woburn Elks with it."

Handsome Dan MacMaster of Lowell told me that a waitress brought him a sandwich that he ordered that looked like it got hit by a Mack truck. "What's this," Dan asked. "Look here Buster," the waitress retorted, "you told me to bring you a ham sandwich and to step on it!"

Did you ever see the sun burst up through the horizon at the beach to give birth to a new day? The waves sparkle as they catch the rays of a glorious sunrise. Well, that's the way it seems to me when Pamela MacKill enters a room at the FDA Lab in Winchester. Pam's bright smile and cheery "Good Morning," signals the start of another wonderful day.

John Riddings and his lovely wife Jeanne, live in North Reading. He told me that he looked out his window early this morning and saw a "Piecost." "What's a piecost," I exclaimed. "Oh," John said, "Apple pie is $1.09 and blueberry pie is $1.49. Now you know what your readers read you put up with when they read your stupid jokes in Woodchips!"

I extend a warm welcome to Maureen Doherty, a 1987 graduate of North Adams State College, who has joined the staff of the North Reading Transcript as a reporter. Being a "Cub" reporter is the first step in the long ladder of positions in a newspaper. I wish you, Maureen, every success.

Richard Powers, is the Editor of a Greater Boston newspaper.

On a recent tour of the South Sea Islands, he was captured and brought before a cannibal chief, who spoke perfect English. "What kind of work did you do in the States?" "I was the assistant editor of a newspaper." "Cheer up," responded the cannibal chief with a smile, "after tomorrow's dinner you will be, 'Editor in Chief!'"

Some people are overly generous donating other peoples' time, talent and money for a particular cause. To illustrate a case in point, a chicken and a pig on a farm were trying to find a way to show their gratitude to the farmer for being so kind to them. The chicken said, "Let's prepare him a wonderful breakfast of ham and eggs for next Sunday morning." "Just a minute," said the pig. "For you, it represents a minor contribution — but for me, it's a total commitment."

In a calm sea, every man is a pilot.

Beneath this turf and clump of clay, lies Uncle Peter Daniels. Who early in the month of May took off his winter flannels. An atheist's epitaph, all dressed up and no place to go.

Ernest Alvino thought it would be nice to revive an old custom that was common in his father's native Italy. So, he asked his wife Muffy if she would mind walking two paces behind him on their Sunday afternoon stroll in the park? Muffy, poignantly asked Ernest, "Do you know how to stuff peppers?"

One hours sleep before midnight is worth three after. Frank Mazzoni of Wilmington said to me, "Woodchipper, you look like a walking passport picture." Folks, there are two kinds of people in this world, those who lift and those who lean. I hope that this column helps you lift your spirits. My Uncle John Shea said, "Woodchipper, I don't need your column to help me lift my spirits. I drink only light beer." I told you folks that I get my "wit" from the Irish side of my family. O.K., I may hold a "Blue Eyes" contest soon. First prize will be one week in Philadelphia. Second prize will be two weeks in Philadelphia.

If you see Eddie Spooner, working around Stoneham Square, ask him how's business Eddie? He may answer, "Picking up." That's exactly what this energetic young man does for the D.P.W. Eddie has 28 years of dedicated service, five of which were as clean up man on the square. If you see him, tell him the good news — he made the "Woodchips Column." I can almost hear him reply, "Who the heck cares?"

"Who will carry the mail to Red Gulch?" That was an often made call for a volunteer during the "Pony Express," days to carry the mail through dangerous Indian Territory. Very often, the answer would be, "I will, I'm Red Dalton of the United States Marines." Seriously, the Marines have carried more than the mail since those hectic frontier days. They have fought with valor on Guadalcanal, Iwo Jima, the Marshall Islands, etc., etc. Woodchips is proud of all of them.

Folks, please — when people come to share their fears with you, do share your courage with them. Woodchips welcomes Richard Midwood, Don Young, and Vinny Harrington of Reading. Also, Bill Adams and Tony Falco of Winchester, and Bob Brennan of Wakefield. If you want to forget all your troubles — wear tight shoes. The Indians looked up at the mysterious rainbow in awe. We have lost more than we've gained when we found out what a rainbow really is.

"I notice that you still walk with a military gait, but your hinges are getting a little rusty!" Our unit was attached to her majesty's 121st Fusiliers. We were nick-named "the Paperhangers." On every border patrol we took an awful pasting and came apart at the seams.

It takes a child two years to learn how to talk and it takes a man 50 years to learn to keep his mouth shut. Mike Gaffny stopped his car in Reading square and asked a beautiful lady waiting for a bus, "Hi cutie, want a ride?" "Are you going North?" she replied, "Yes I am." "Give my regards to the Eskimos." I asked Richard Hamel, "Do you know how the trains from Lawrence to Boston run?" "No I don't," he replied. "Well, Richard," I said, "There's a set of tracks and the locomotive and passenger cars have wheels under them and — hey, Richard come back here. I haven't finished telling you how the trains run." "Who cares," he exclaimed, "I take a bus."

Exercise courses fit for everyone

The Community Health Education Department of the Regional Health Center in Wilmington is offering in September a variety of innovative exercise programs to meet the needs of special interest groups in the community.

"Fit For All" exercise programs are as follows:

MOVIE REVIEWS Rochelle Flynn

The Big Easy and House II

The Big Easy Starring Dennis Quaid, Ellen Barkin, Ned Beatty. Directed by Jim McBride. Produced by Stephen Friedman. Written by Daniel Petrie, Jr. Rated R (profanity, violence, sexual situations).

The day after you see The Big Easy you probably won't be able to say what it's about. Police corruption in New Orleans, a steamy love affair between leads Dennis Quaid and Ellen Barkin. A drug war between warring heroin dealers. Who knows? Who cares? This movie is so much damn fun that the plot becomes secondary to the romance and humor and lively Cajun music.

Director Jim McBride used music to set the tone of the film, much as he did in his remake of "Breathless" in 1983. It permeates the film, giving added depth to the richness of the Cajun backdrop. McBride is one director who had the brains to portray these people as close-knit, loyal, earthy people, and not the backwoods, inbred slob movies often make them out to be.

Quaid plays the cop on the take who learns from District Attorney Barkin that honesty is the way to a woman's heart. Quaid, and that devilish smile of his, has never been better. He's everything a leading man should be, funny, sexy and talented.

Barkin is not usually cast as the erotic leading lady-type, but her DA is as hot in the rack as she is funny on the job. Stumbling over bodies and getting sick at the sight of blood, she gives a humanity to the tough-minded DA that is as appealing to Quaid's character as it is to the audience. Quaid's cop is smooth and ingratiating and very warm, while Barkin's lawyer is cooler, reserved, more sophisticated. Playing off each others foibles, they make a lovely celluloid couple.

The aggressive violence in this film crescendos in an overdone gunfight at a marina, but Ned Beatty is convincing as the police chief who's in over his head on an "early retirement deal" that real cops would frown on. But even if the storyline is a bit above reality, this is still one of the most entertaining movies released this summer.

House II Starring Arye Gross, Jonathan Stark, Royal Dano, Bill Maher. Directed and written by Ethan Wiley. Produced by Sean S. Cunningham. Rated PG-13 (profanity, violence).

Ethan Wiley. Remember that name. He's the man who wrote House and the copycat House II and made his directorial debut with the latter. If you see that name on a film in the future, be wary. Originality is not this guy's strong point.

While there was definitely an audience out there for House, a lot of us just found it a silly movie. True, it blended horror and comedy, but it was neither very funny nor very scary. So, why would anyone want to rehearse a luke warm idea? Well, no one said Hollywood's strong point was originality either.

Jesse McLaughlin's (Arye Gross) family home is a large, unfriendly stone mansion, but into it he moves with his girlfriend. It's gloomy and musty-looking, but he's taken a shine to it. While pouring over some family memorabilia, Jesse comes across a photo of his great-great grandfather, whom he was named after. With the help of these photos and some nifty deductive powers, he's able to figure out that the crystal skull old Gramps had possession of is buried with him.

As Jesse's sudden best friend had shown up the night before, the two decide to dig Gramps up and retrieve the valuable skull. They do this, of course, late at night when bright sunshine can't get in their eyes. Up comes Gramps, who is still alive, and explains the wonderful powers of the skull, which kept him going for nigh on 170 years. But it's such a wonderful object that evil beings will try to snatch it away from them. The bad guys, not as smart as young Jesse, had apparently never thought to look in Gramp's coffin.

FREEWHEELING NEW ORLEANS detective Remy McSwain (Dennis Quaid) and beautiful, straight-laced assistant district attorney Anne Osborne (Ellen Barkin) clash professionally but manage to fall in love in Kings Road Entertainment's The Big Easy. Released by Columbia Pictures, the film also stars Ned Beatty, was directed by Jim McBride from a screenplay by Daniel Petrie, Jr. and produced by Stephen Friedman.

One of the more successful gags in House was that you never knew what was going to happen when you opened a door. There may be an alternate universe behind it, or maybe just an ironing board. But in House II, you know exactly. From the pre-historic jungle to the sacrificial Aztec altar to the old West, the plot is one predictable door after another. Three times the skull is snatched and three times Jesse plunged into a time warp to bring it back.

If you look at this strictly as a horror yarn, expect to be disappointed. The special effects are patently obvious. Latex and fright wigs abound, and there is one especially inept attempt at a baby pterodactyl focusing on a particular member of the opposite sex. He or she doesn't have to be envisioned favorably, either. It can be somebody you dislike. Nothing makes me more tired than concentrating on slowly sticking pins into some turkey who's just ruined my day.

ROVING

that looks like it could have been purchased at Child World. There are one or two funny scenes, and the whole bit by John Ratzenberger, better known as Cliff on Cheers, is priceless. Ratzenberger's comic timing as an "electrician and adventurer" was delightful. But then, when you look at the medium he performed in, you realize it wouldn't take much for a talented actor to steal the show.

Short Takes

No Way Out is a beautifully made film with one of the silliest plots you may encounter on film. This military/murder/spy story has plenty of Ludlumesque paranoia and tense situations, fine performances and high production values, but there isn't much point if you don't buy the basic premise. Rated R. • •

I'd like to go to sleep right now, in fact. Only I know better. I'd only end up wide awake again. So I think I'm going to try to outsmart myself by taking off my clothes and heading right for the refrigerator. There's this poem I've been dying to put down on paper and this seems like a great time to do it. And then there is that one more beer that'll never get drunk.

The Great Lakes hold some 6 quadrillion gallons of fresh water — one-fifth of all the surface fresh water on earth and 95 percent of all the surface fresh water in the United States, says National Geographic.

At age 17, his formal work career began, first as a tire changer, and then within several months he was promoted to apprentice auto mechanic. During his apprentice-

The automotive grapevine soon spread the word about an exceptional young man in Malden and this brought a regional tire and auto service company to seek his services as supervisor of their mechanical department. Later, another offer from one of the largest and auto service firms in New England captured him. His expertise now earned him the position of vice president of this company.

Now, at age 41, his ultimate dream has come true. Asked if he had any apprehension about opening his own business, Villemure said, "Look, I'm human, and surely
